

G.O.P. "OIL DEAL" DENIED BY THOMPSON

PREDICTS FARMING CHANGE IN STATE THIS YEAR

WHEAT TO BE REDUCED, SOME CROPS TO GAIN

U. S. Department of Agriculture Sees Pronounced Change in North Dakota

OUTLOOK FAVORABLE

Large Part of Seeding in Eastern Part to be on Land Plowed Last Fall

March 1 intentions of farmers in North Dakota if carried out will mean a curtailment of spring wheat acreage in 1924 and increase in acreage of the complementary crops of oats and barley as well as strong increase in corn and flax acreage, according to a survey just completed by the U. S. Bureau of Agricultural Economics. The intentions, however, are subject to modification on part of farmers as later conditions affecting the crops may develop, and must be regarded therefore, not as estimates of acreage for 1924, but as serving the purpose of informing farmers in the various sections of the country of what is contemplated, so that final farm plans may be modified to avoid serious over-planting or under-planting of particular crops. The statement of the U. S. statistician continues:

For the United States, except in the case of spring wheat and flax, the intended shifts are not extreme, and in the case of spring wheat and flax, it should be remembered that the large bulk of the producing area is located in North-Central United States and a large percentage in North Dakota. For the North-Central United States (west of the Mississippi) which includes most of the spring wheat and some of the corn belt states, intended decrease in wheat acreage has in mind moderately larger acreages of corn, oats, barley and flax. For North Dakota intentions are much more pronounced as regards a shift from spring wheat into other crops.

More pronounced here

For the United States as a whole, the U. S. Department of Agriculture in a report issued last Tuesday, interpreted the outlooks as indicating that farmers were undertaking a normal production program, and that Agriculture this year will still be attended by the difficulties arising from higher wages and other costs, less farm workers and the general disparity between prices of farm and urban products. The wheat situation was described as showing some improvement with the market continuing somewhat more favorable for producers of spring wheat than winter wheat.

In the North Dakota survey 530 farms representing practically all counties of the state were quite uniform in showing an intended curtailment of wheat acreage in favor of corn, oats, barley and flax, with a general indication of an intended strong increase in flax. It is a question as to just how far farmers will carry out expressed intentions with respect to spring wheat, an important factor being the character of the spring season, whether favorable or unfavorable for an early seeding. To a somewhat less extent the character of the planting season will also affect intentions with respect to the other crops.

Progress of Farm Work

A summary of the general factors entering into the outlook in North Dakota this spring follows:

Normally spring work in North Dakota should be in general progress by the second week in April, although present indications unless offset by unfavorable weather in the latter part of March or in early April are favorable for a somewhat earlier start than usual. Present activities are largely confined to those of repairing farm machinery and equipment and cleaning of seed together with some late hauling of last year's crops. For these operations weather and road conditions have been quite favorable. As affecting spring work the amount of plowing accomplished last fall will be a favorable factor over the eastern third of the state where the bulk of spring seeding goes in on this fall-plowed practice. 55 per cent of all farm-lands were estimated to have been plowed last fall compared with 41 per cent in the fall of 1922 and 60 per cent in the fall of 1921.

PLANS NOW TO BE FORMED FOR NEXT ELECTION

State Primary of June 25 Is The Next One on the Boards For Voters

INDEPENDENT PLANS

Expected That Steps Will Be Taken Soon For the Calling of Convention

A meeting of the Independent Voters Association executive committee to consider the question of holding a convention to nominate an anti-league state ticket may be held in Fargo next Saturday, L. L. Twichell, chairman, said here today. Mr. Twichell said that plans for the convention, or other action, were indefinite at this time.

Mr. Twichell discussed the matter with several state officials and others here informally. Many here favor a convention date about April 20.

North Dakota, having emerged from one election, will begin to prepare for another. The state primary is June 25. The Nonpartisan League has already nominated candidates, several independent candidates are in the field for various offices, and the anti-league forces will now begin preparations for the impending battle.

In addition to nominating candidates for state offices, including one place on the supreme bench, county and legislative elections will be held. There is a possibility that the voters of the state also may cast ballots on various measures. Petitions are now being circulated for a tax reduction measure proposed by the North Dakota Tax Payers Association, under which levies would be cut 25 percent with provision that 15 percent of the cut could be removed by voters. Petitions must be filed by March 27, for initiated measures.

The first day for filing nominating petitions with the Secretary of State is April 26, and May 26 is the last day for filing petitions for state candidacies, while county petitions may be filed after May 16.

It is expected that the Independent Voters Association, Democratic and Republican committees, will get together on the plan of naming the Independent voters.

PROPOSE FULL TIME HEALTH PROGRAM HERE

Plan for Burleigh County, City and Schools Is Laid Before Gathering

TO PREVENT DISEASE

International Health Board Would Advance $5,000 Annually for Work

Proposal that Burleigh county undertake a full-time health program with a full-time staff in cooperation with the International Health Board, a branch of the Rockefeller Foundation, and the United States government was laid before a group of officials and others here Saturday night by Dr. P. W. Covington of the International Health Board. The program has the approval of the State Health Department.

The proposal was presented at a meeting attended by Dr. A. A. Whittemore, state health officer; A. F. Bradley, secretary of the Association of Commerce; A. P. Lehart, G. F. Register and W. F. Jones of the city school board; M. H. Atkinson, city auditor; F. J. Johnson, county auditor; members of the city commission and representatives of the Red Cross and Social Service Bureau.

It was explained that Burleigh county, the city and schools now spend about $5,000 annually for health work. The International Health Board and possibly the Sheppard-Towner act administration, would match this amount, giving a yearly budget of about $10,000. The full-time health board to be employed would include a health officer, two nurses and money would be provided for administrative expenses.

The purpose of the organization would be to prevent disease, through and education. Dr. Covington said that half the deaths in the county resulted from disease which could have been prevented. He estimated, from an economic standpoint, that each life was worth $1,700 annually to the community. If but one percent of the deaths could be avoided through this activity, he said, the county would gain financially.

The city, county and schools would pool the money now spent on health work, to be spent under the proposed arrangement, the total amount to remain about the same. It is proposed to try out this plan in two or three counties in the state, Burleigh being the first to which Dr. Covington has come.

At the conclusion of the meeting a committee composed of G. F. Register, representing the city school board; G. F. Dullam, representing the public health committee of the Association of Commerce, and J. P. French representing the city commission, was named to confer with the board of county commissioners at their next meeting, on the plan.

WILL BUILD NEW SCHOOL

Contract Let For Building in Dickinson to Cost $85,000 Complete

Dickinson, N. D., Mar. 24.—Bids for the 12 room parochial school building to be erected during the coming season at St. Joseph's church, in Dickinson, were formally and finally awarded at a meeting of the church building board held last night.

A. J. Weinberger, Beach contractor was awarded the general contract for $49,910. The contract for the plumbing and heating went to J. W. McElroy of Dickinson for $15,226. The ventilating system will be installed by the Grand Forks Tin Shop for $1,418. Mike Mack was awarded the contract for painting, his bid being $2,049. The contract for electric wiring and fixtures was awarded to D. A. Cunniff for $1,540.

Plans for the new building which will occupy lots south of the church and across the street from the St. Anthony hall, were drafted by J. E. Rosatti, Fargo architect. Mr. Rosatti has spent considerable time in Dickinson during the past few weeks, going over the plans with members of the board and with Rev. Fr. George Aberle, pastor of the church.

The building will be of fireproof construction, modern throughout and equipped with the latest heating and ventilating systems. Hebron faced brick and Dickinson tiling will be used exclusively in construction work.

The building finished will cost approximately $85,000. Contracts call for the completion of the structure by September 1, 1924, when it will be occupied by the school.

SINCLAIR PAID FALL FOR AID ON RUSS TRIP

Oil Man, in Statement, Says That Employment of Him Was Legitimate

ATTACKS ROOSEVELTS

Charges Attempt to Assassinate Character Is Made By Them

SENATE NOTES

Washington, Mar. 24.—The Senate today rushed forward another step in the contempt case against Harry F. Sinclair by voting to certify to the U. S. Attorney the facts in connection with his refusal to answer questions before the oil committee. The vote was 72 to 1, Senator Elkins, Republican, West Virginia, casting the negative vote.

Washington, Mar. 24.—Harry F. Sinclair was formally cited for his refusal to submit to further questioning by the oil committee.

Immediately after Chairman Ladd submitted the citation, Senator Walsh, the committee prosecutor, recommended that the case be certified to the District of Columbia courts for grand jury proceedings.

Washington, March 24.—After refusing to testify, Harry F. Sinclair issued a statement in which he gave his version of the Teapot Dome affair.

Sinclair said the $25,000 he gave former Secretary of the Interior, B. H. Fall in Liberty bonds was received by Fall on the eve of departing for Russia as the oil man's counsel and $10,000 was paid Fall by the Russian oil interests.

Sinclair struck back savagely at Theodore and Archie Roosevelt, accusing them of "framing" his former secretary, G. W. Wahlberg, in order to blacken Sinclair's character. Sinclair said Archie refused to have an ability, though he raised his salary from $5,000 gradually to $15,000.

Sinclair, in his voluntary statement, said that Archie and Colonel Theodore Roosevelt attempted to "assassinate" him by framing Wahlberg.

He paid a million dollars to Fred G. Bonifay, of Denver, for invalidated claims to Teapot Dome, because his lawyers so advised. He stated if there was "any fraudulent representation of blackmail," proper redress would be sought in the courts.

He did not enter into negotiations with Fall for the lease of Teapot Dome as early as March, 1921, the month Fall took office.

"During my negotiations with former Secretary Fall in relation to the Mammoth Oil contract," said Mr. Sinclair, "I had become impressed by his knowledge of international law, and by his ability to handle the world oil situation, so when this Russian matter was submitted to me during the latter part of April or the early part of May, 1923, I considered it important that we should have with us on our contemplated trip to Russia, a man of the ability and experience of the former secretary."

Defends Right to Employ Fall

"That was about three months after Mr. Fall had retired from President Harding's cabinet. As he was then a private citizen and ready to resume the practice of his profession, I saw no reason why I should not employ him as legal counsel in connection with the negotiations at the time I undertook, with representatives of the Russian government. Accordingly, I set about securing his services and as we were to sail from New York on May 26, 1923, which date was then close at hand, I instructed Mr. Zeveloff, one of my attorneys, to endeavor to have Mr. Fall sail with us or follow us to Europe at the earliest possible moment."

"Mr. Zeveloff later advised me that if Mr. Fall was to leave on such short notice for an extended European trip it would be necessary for him to have a sum of money approximately $25,000 to meet certain obligations. It was more convenient at the moment for me to let him have securities rather than cash amounting to $25,000, so I instructed Mr. Zeveloff, in case Mr. Fall should make the trip to get the amount in Liberty Bonds from my private secretary."

"No Secrecy," Says Sinclair

"I left for Europe before the matter was arranged but was of course informed about it."

"I wish to state, however, that there was not the slightest secrecy connected with this transaction. The bonds were sent by express to the bank designated by Mr. Fall and a letterhead written by Mr. Zeveloff requesting the bank to place the bonds to Mr. Fall's credit."

"It is obvious that no need was felt to practice concealment or subterfuge. Testimony has been offered before the committee regarding $10,000 which was advanced to Mr. Fall against the expenses of his trip to Russia."

BROODING OVER WIFE'S DEATH LEADS TO FARM WORKER'S SUICIDE

William Hilder, Who Recently Came From Iowa, Shoots Himself to Death at Reed Farm 20 Miles Southeast of Bismarck

William Hilder, about 30, killed himself at the residence of I. J. Reed, about 20 miles southeast of Bismarck yesterday afternoon by shooting himself with a shotgun. Despondency over the death of his wife at Pringle, Iowa, about three weeks ago, is said by those who knew him to have led him to commit suicide.

Hilder's body was discovered by Mr. and Mrs. Ralph Sater, neighbors, who had gone to the Reed home to make arrangements for bringing a gasoline engine to Bismarck. They pushed open the door and saw Hilder's body lying on the floor in a bedroom. He had placed the muzzle of the gun at the pit of his stomach, holding the butt of the gun in his thumb. Death probably was instantaneous. His body was discovered about 4 p. m. He probably had been dead two hours.

After Hilder's wife died he came to North Dakota to work, first visiting relatives around McKenzie. He also had relatives around Steele. He had worked for Mr. Reed 12 days. Neighbors said he brooded a great deal and seemed very lone-some. A new testament was found in a vest pocket, with marks indicating he had been reading it a great deal of late.

Coroner E. J. Gobel, who investigated the death, said an inquest would not be necessary. He wired Hilder's parents at Pringle, Iowa, and arrangements for the funeral will be made by wire.

Coroner Gobel received a telegram today stating Hilder was an honorably discharged soldier and requesting a military funeral be held. Services probably will be held tomorrow in the Webb parlors with Etnash Shipping of the Salvation Army in charge.

DRESSES FOR OWN FUNERAL

Washington, N. D., Mar. 24.—D. Mahoney, an aged pioneer of the northern part of the county died at the home of his son, Dennis Mahoney, Sunday, at the advanced age of 84 years. Informants of old age was given as the cause of his death. The morning of the day of his death he asked his son to dress him in the clothes he was to be buried in, which was done for him. That evening he died, entering peacefully and tranquilly into that last long slumber. The funeral services were held the following Wednesday. Besides the one son, there is another son and daughter.

REBELS SEEN FINAL VICTORS

Predicted That They Will Win Out in Honduras

Washington, Mar. 24.—Early collapse of the de facto government in Honduras and ultimate success of the revolutionary forces headed by General Ferriera was predicted today in dispatches received by the Navy department.

Commander Causey, in charge of the American Naval Detachment, sent to protect American lives and property in Tegucigalpa, the Honduran capital, predicted certain victory for the revolutionists.

Commander Causey also forwarded to the Navy department by radio through the Milwaukee "authentic reports prepared by Associated Press representatives which the de facto government would not permit to be forwarded from Tegucigalpa."

The paraphrase of the A. P. dispatches issued by the Navy department said it was the general opinion that the de facto government would not resist revolutionary pressure much longer. The western area of the country and all the north coast was said to be in the hands of the revolutionists and a final attack on the capital by Ferriera was expected at any time.

Daily fights in the suburbs of the capital are taking place.

Due to inability of the de facto government to maintain order on March 18, the dispatches said, the city was in a state of anarchy. Murder, looting and general disorder prevailed everywhere. It was this situation that caused Minister Frank Morales to call for a detachment of sailors from the Milwaukee.

A neutral zone has been agreed upon by the de facto and revolutionary leaders to afford safety for foreigners. It is patrolled by the American sailors.

LaMoure, N. D., March 24.—Fire recently destroyed Ed Gontkowski's barn near LaMoure together with 14 horses, 13 cows, 46 sheep, harness, tools and 700 bushels of feed. The loss is placed at $5,000 with $2,500 insurance.

SYSTEMATIC "SELLING" OF STATE TO TOURISTS IS PLAN FOR 1924

Business men along the route of the National Parks Highway in North Dakota will be urged to "sell" the state to tourists who travel the route in automobiles this coming season.

A. F. Bradley, secretary of the Association of Commerce and North Dakota director of the National Parks Highway, plans to leave here Friday on a few days trip to towns between here and Fargo to introduce the idea. It is proposed that in addition to providing the ordinary services for tourists, garage owners, hotel men and others cooperate in a systematic manner to lay before the tourists the advantages of North Dakota to add a personal touch which will make the tourist feel there is unusual hospitality in this state.

The idea is to send the tourist back home a booster not only for the National Parks Highway, but to tell his neighbors of the unusual service in hotels, garages and tourist camps, but to correct false impressions of North Dakota and to point out the economic possibilities of the state.

Witnesses Pass in Rapid Succession Before Oil Committee Today

REFUSES TESTIMONY

Washington, Mar. 24.—C. C. Chase, son-in-law of Albert B. Fall, declined to answer any questions by the oil committee today on the ground that any answers he might make might tend to incriminate him.

Price McKinney of Cleveland had testified that Chase visited him at his home to ask him to say that he had made the famous $10,000 loan to Fall.

Washington, Mar. 24.—Odds and ends testimony bearing on widely separated aspects of the inquiry went into the record of the oil committee today while its members were perfecting plans to hail Harry F. Sinclair into court because of his refusal to submit himself to further questioning.

As if the committee members had determined to push their task of investigation to a quick conclusion witnesses succeeded each other rapidly at the big committee table today and most of them were dismissed with only a scant resemblance of cross-examination.

Carmi A. Thompson of Cleveland, one of President Coolidge's campaign managers and a close friend of the late President Harding, testified that he had no knowledge of an "oil deal" at the Republican national convention of 1920.

Harold Vivian, a reporter of the New York office of Will H. Hays, testified that he would testify to any other matters he said had been circulated about him, which Sinclair helped wipe out the Republican national committee deficit after the 1920 campaign. Vivian said such a story was told to him by Joseph O'Neill, Hays' publicity director, but O'Neill in a telegram read to the committee denied it.

The next witness, Martin J. Powers of Philadelphia, denied a story that he was interested in any way in Teapot Dome and then proceeded to brand his "anonymous libel" as "other matters he said had been circulated about him."

He was succeeded on the witness stand by Michael C. Cicelli, also of Philadelphia, who in turn denied some of the testimony of Powers.

Washington, Mar. 24.—Carmi A. Thompson of Cleveland, manager of President Coolidge's campaign in Ohio, was called as the first witness today in the oil inquiry.

In his examination of the witness the committee traced out a story of an "oil deal" at the Chicago convention which nominated Harding. Meantime preparations were completed to leave to the courts the refusal of Harry F. Sinclair to testify further.

Before the questioning of Thompson began there was a brief excursion into the matter of Sinclair's contribution to the Republican national committee to help make up the deficit resulting from the 1920 campaign.

Senator Spencer, Republican, Missouri, remarked that he had noticed that a subpoena was out for Fred W. Upham, the Republican national treasurer.

"I now ask that we subpoena the chairman and secretary of the Democratic national committee," said Spencer. "I notice Mr. E. L. Doherty testified he gave $75,000 to the Democratic national committee while its records show as published only $8,000 from him. Since we are going into these matters we ought to get both sides."

Senator Walsh, Democrat, Montana, suggested that the Republican funds had been investigated only so far as they were involved in the oil lease and Senator D. Democrat, Washington, said the Republican administration had been elected and this made the inquiry into Republican funds pertinent.

Defers Decision

At the suggestion of Senator Walsh the committee deferred a decision and began the questioning of Thompson, who was at the Chicago convention as a Harding supporter. The witness said he did not hear Jake Harmon, oil operator, and Republican national committeeman for Oklahoma make a statement of any kind to Senator Harding or his associates for the delivery of the Oklahoma delegation. He certainly made no such proposition to me," he added.

Reading from a prepared statement Thompson said:

"I have been called before you to tell about a statement which one Tressin Gilmore (deputy secretary of state of Ohio) testified before you that I was alleged to have made to him concerning political deals and other matters at the Republican national convention held in Chicago."

"If Mr. Gilmore was quoted correctly in the newspapers he said that

PROPOSE FULL TIME HEALTH PROGRAM HERE

SINCLAIR PAID FALL FOR AID ON RUSS TRIP

Oil Man, in Statement, Says That Employment of Him Was Legitimate

ATTACKS ROOSEVELTS

Charges Attempt to Assassinate Character Is Made By Them

SENATE NOTES
Washington, Mar. 24.—The Senate today pushed forward another step in the contempt case against Harry F. Sinclair by voting to certify to the U. S. Attorney the facts in connection with his refusal to answer questions before the oil committee. The vote was 72 to 1. Senator Elkins, Republican, West Virginia, casting the negative vote.

Washington, Mar. 24.—Harry F. Sinclair was formally cited to the Senate today for contempt for his refusal to submit to further questioning by the oil committee.

Immediately after Chairman Ladd submitted the citation, Senator Walsh, the committee prosecutor, recommended that the case be certified to the District of Columbia courts for grand jury proceedings.

Washington, March 24.—After refusing to testify, Harry F. Sinclair issued a statement in which he gave his version of the Teapot Dome affair.

Sinclair said the $25,000 he gave former Secretary of the Interior, A. B. Fall in Liberty bonds was requested by Fall on the eve of departing for Russia as the oil man's counsel and $10,000 was paid Fall by the Russian oil interests.

Sinclair struck back savagely at Theodore and Archie Roosevelt, accusing them of "framing" his former secretary, G. W. Wahlberg, in order to blacken Sinclair's character. Sinclair said Archie proved to have no ability, though he raised his salary from $5,000 gradually to $15,000. Sinclair, in his voluntary statement, said that:

Archie and Colonel Theodore Roosevelt attempted to "assassinate" my character. He paid a million dollars to Fred G. Bonfils, of Denver, for invalidated claims to Teapot Dome, because his lawyers so advised. He stated if there was "any fraudulent representation of blackmail," proper redress would be sought in the courts.

He did not enter into negotiations with Fall for the lease of Teapot Dome as early as March, 1921, the month Fall took office. "During my negotiations with former Secretary Fall in relation to the Mammoth Oil contract," said Mr. Sinclair, "I had become impressed by his knowledge of international law, and by his acquaintance with the world oil situation, so when this Russian matter was submitted to me during the latter part of April or the early part of May, 1923, I considered it important that we should have on our contemplated trip to Russia, a man of the ability and experience of the former secretary."

Defence Right to Employ Fall
"That was about three months after Mr. Fall had retired from President Harding's cabinet. As he was then a private citizen and ready to resume the practice of his profession, I saw no reason why I should not employ him as legal counsel in connection with negotiations we were about to undertake, with representatives of the Russian government. Accordingly I set about securing his services and as we were to sail from New York on May 26, 1923, which date was then close at hand, I instructed Mr. Zevely, one of my attorneys, to endeavor to have Mr. Fall sail with us or follow us to Europe at the earliest possible moment."

"Mr. Zevely later advised me that if Mr. Fall was to leave on such short notice for an extended European trip it would be necessary for him to have a sum of money approximately $25,000 to meet certain obligations. It was more convenient at the moment for me to let him have securities rather than cash amounting to $25,000, so I instructed Mr. Zevely in case Mr. Fall should make the trip to get the amount in Liberty Bonds from my private secretary."

"No Secrecy," Says Sinclair
"I left for Europe before the matter was arranged but was of course informed about it."

"I wish to state, however, that there was not the slightest secrecy connected with this transaction. The bonds were sent by express to the bank designated by Mr. Fall and a letter was written by Mr. Zevely requesting the bank to place the bonds to Mr. Fall's credit."

"It is obvious that no need was felt to practise concealment or subterfuge. Testimony has been offered before the committee regarding $10,000 which was advanced to Mr. Fall against the expenses of his trip to (Continued on page 3)

BROODING OVER WIFE'S DEATH LEADS TO FARM WORKER'S SUICIDE

William Hilker, Who Recently Came From Iowa, Shoots Himself to Death at Reed Farm 20 Miles Southeast of Bismarck

William Hilker, about 30, killed himself at the residence of I. J. Reed, about 20 miles southeast of Bismarck yesterday afternoon by shooting himself with a shotgun. Despondency over the death of his wife at Pringhar, Iowa, about three weeks ago, is said by those who knew him to have led him to commit suicide.

Hilker's body was discovered by Mr. and Mrs. Ralph Sater, neighbors, who had gone to the Reed home to make arrangements for bringing a gasoline engine to Bismarck. They pushed open the door and saw Hilker's body lying on the floor in a bedroom. He had placed the muzzle of the gun at the pit of his stomach, holding the butt of the gun in the air, and pushed the trigger with his thumb. Death probably was instantaneous. His body was discovered about 4 p. m. He probably had been dead two hours.

REBELS SEEN FINAL VICTORS

Predicted That They Will Win Out in Honduras

Washington, Mar. 24.—Early collapse of the de facto government in Honduras and ultimate success of the revolutionary forces headed by General Ferrera was predicted today in dispatches received by the Navy department.

Commander Causey, in charge of the American Naval Detachment, sent to protect American lives and property in Tegucigalpa, the Honduran capital, predicted certain victory for the revolutionists.

Commander Causey also forwarded to the Navy department by radio through the Milwaukee "authentic reports prepared by Associated Press representatives which indicated that the de facto government would not resist revolutionary pressure much longer. The western area of the country and all the north coast was said to be in the hands of the revolutionists and a final attack on the capital by Ferrera was expected at any time.

Daily flights in the suburbs of the capital are taking place. Due to inability of the de facto government to maintain order on March 18, the dispatches said, the city was in a state of anarchy. Murder, looting and general disorder prevailed everywhere. It was this situation that caused Minister Frank Morales to call for a detachment of sailors from the Milwaukee.

A neutral zone has been agreed upon by de facto and revolutionary leaders to afford safety for foreigners. It is patrolled by the American sailors.

OTHERS TAKE STAND

REFUSES TESTIMONY

Washington, Mar. 24.—C. C. Chase, son-in-law of Albert B. Fall, declined to answer any questions by the oil committee today on the ground that any answers he might make might tend to incriminate him.

Price McKinney of Cleveland had testified that Chase visited him at his home to ask him to say that he had made the famous $10,000 loan to Fall.

Washington, Mar. 24.—Odds and ends of testimony bearing on widely separated aspects of its inquiry went into the record of the oil committee today while its members were perfecting plans to hail Harry F. Sinclair into court because of his refusal to submit himself to further questioning.

As if the committeemen had determined to push their task of investigation to a quick conclusion witnesses succeeded each other rapidly at the big committee table today and most of them were dismissed with only a cursory resemblance of cross-examination.

Carmi A. Thompson of Cleveland, one of President Coolidge's campaign managers and a close friend of the late President Harding, testified that he had no knowledge of an "oil deal" at the Republican national convention of 1920. Harold Vivian, a reporter of the New York Times, told the committee he had received confirmation from the New York office of Will H. Hays that Hays would testify to a stock transaction by which Sinclair "helped" wipe out the Republican national committee deficit after the 1920 campaign. Vivian said such a story was told to him by Joseph O'Neill, Hays' publicity director, but O'Neill in a telegram read to the committee denied it.

The next witness, Martin J. Powers of Philadelphia, denied a story that he was interested in any way in Teapot Dome and then proceeded to brand as "ignominious libel" various other stories he said had been circulated about him.

He was succeeded on the witness stand by Michael C. Cicirelli, also of Philadelphia, who in turn denied some of the testimony of Powers.

Washington, Mar. 24.—Carmi A. Thompson of Cleveland, manager of President Coolidge's campaign in Ohio, was called as the first witness today in the oil inquiry.

In his examination the witness the committee turned again to stories of an "oil deal" at the Chicago convention which nominated Harding. Meantime preparations were completed to leave to the courts the refusal of Harry F. Sinclair to testify further.

Before the questioning of Thompson began there was a brief excursion into the matter of Sinclair's contribution to the Republican national committee to help make up the deficit resulting from the 1920 campaign.

Senator Spencer, Republican, Missouri, remarked that he had noticed that a subpoena was out for Fred W. Upham, the Republican national treasurer.

"I now ask that we subpoena the chairman and secretary of the Democratic national committee," said Spencer. He noted that E. L. Doherty testified he gave $75,000 to the Democratic national committee while its records show as published only $8,000 from him. Since we are going into these matters we ought to get both sides.

Senator Walsh, Democrat, Montana, suggested that the Republican funds had been investigated only so far as they were involved in the oil lease and Senator Dill, Democrat, Washington, said the Republican administration had been elected and this made the inquiry into Republican funds pertinent.

Defer Decision
At the suggestion of Senator Walsh the committee deferred a decision and began the questioning of Thompson, who was at the Chicago convention as a Harding supporter. The witness said he did not hear Jake Hamon, oil operator, and Republican national committeeman for Oklahoma "make a proposition of any kind to Senator Harding or his associates for the delivery of the Oklahoma delegation." He certainly made no such proposition to me," he added.

Reading from a prepared statement Thompson said: "I have been called before you to tell about a statement which one Tassin Gilmore (deputy secretary of state of Ohio) testified before you that I was alleged to have made to him concerning political deals and other matters at the Republican national convention held in Chicago. "If Mr. Gilmore was quoted correctly in the newspapers he said that (Continued on page 3)

AUTO LICENSE RECEIPTS UP

Almost Three Times as Much To Date as Last Year

They're getting their motor cars out early in North Dakota this year. Receipts up to March 21 in the state motor vehicle registration bureau showed $307,965.70 as compared to $110,765.65 up to the same date last year. A total of 46,396 cars had been registered, of which 17,103 were classed as "non-Fords."

A special effort was made by Motor Vehicle Register John Tucker to get licenses out early this year, the work starting promptly on the first day of January. With an office force of three less than last year, the volume of mail is up to date, Mr. Tucker said. Those applications that are held up are retained chiefly for additional information.

As a result of the big volume of business Mr. Tucker plans to send state inspectors earlier than usual to round up those still displaying 1923 license tags.

BEES DANCE FOR PROFIT

Flapper's Characterization of
"Bees' Knees" Held Not Wrong

Fargo, N. D., Mar. 24.—The flapper who characterized dancing as being the "bees' knees" may not be so far wrong after all. For bees do dance and they appear to derive as much pleasure from their dancing as do humans.

But, unlike humans, there is a purpose to their dancing—a purpose, that is, entirely apart from the pleasure in such abandon. Scientists tell us that each kind is used to give definite information to the other bees. A form of expressive and interpretative dancing, it may be called.

"Honey bees are known to have at least two styles of dances, which are used apparently as means of communication," says Dr. Webster, entomologist at the North Dakota Agricultural college.

In a recent work by Dr. K. von Frisch, Dr. Webster tells us, published in German, there is much interesting information concerning the "language" of bees. When a honey bee comes into the hive fully laden with nectar from a newly discovered source she performs what is known as the "round dance." The returned worker bee runs around in a narrow circle, usually accompanied by four or five other bees who follow her gyrations over the honey combs.

This dance tells the workers in the hive of the new source of nectar and they at once rush out in quest of it. The dance itself is short in duration, usually lasting no longer than a quarter of a minute.

"Another kind of dance is described by the writer of this interesting book," says Dr. Webster. "This second dance is called the 'wag tail dance' and such a dance given by a returned worker bee gives the information to other workers that an abundant supply of pollen, or 'bee bread' is available outside."

CHIFFON SCARFS

Scarfs of black chiffon with large patterns in white are very smart with the black tailleur with the white pinstripe.

BY ALEXANDER HERMAN
NEA Service Staff Writer

(Copyright, 1924, NEA Service, Inc.)
New York, March 24.—Here are Wall Street's views on the forthcoming presidential election, as reflected in its latest betting table:

1. The odds are three to one against the Democrats carrying the election, but Democratic betters are asking six to one.

2. Coolidge's strength hasn't been affected by any of the senatorial probes.

3. But the oil scandal has knocked McAdoo out of the lead for the Democratic nomination and has doubled the odds against his winning it.

4. The chances of a third party are not yet being taken seriously.

5. Ford isn't entirely out of the running.

"These views, of course, reflect only Wall Street's betting judgment, and not necessarily its political sentiment," explains Jean De Chadenes, broker, who has been handling some of the larger political bets made in the financial district. But they show considerable change since I compiled the table, published in The Tribune four months ago.

"At that time Henry Ford was the outstanding candidate, who had a chance of beating Coolidge. But since then he has come out for Coolidge, and spiked his own boom."

"But there is a feeling along the street that he may get into the running; with the odds at 12 to 1 that he doesn't get the nomination of either of the two major parties."

"Coolidge's personal prestige hasn't suffered any by the several senatorial investigations, for he succeeded to the presidency after the events which led to the scandals had occurred. The odds on his chances haven't changed any.

"But those on McAdoo have lengthened, on account of the dragging of his name into the oil investigation, and he has dropped from the leading position in the Democratic line-up to fourth place."

"With the shift Ralston's, Underwood's and Smith's chances have improved, and Daniels, Baker and Senator Walsh of Montana have crept into the first ten."

"In the Republican line La Follette and Borah have moved up, from 10 to 1 and for the presidency to odds of 7 to 1 for the nomination. Governor Pinchot has dropped down, on account of seeming inactive in coming out for the nomination."

"Not very much money has been bet on the election yet. The largest bet being a $100,000 to $38,000 wager against Ford's election. But this was made before Ford came out for Coolidge."

"One better," says De Chadenes, "is ready to wager $25,000 that the next president will be Democratic. He is holding out for odds of 6 to 1; but only 3 to 1 is being offered."

"With the campaign still months away, betters are holding back a bit, for they want to be a little more sure of what candidates will make active fights."

"But none of them seems to see a Third Party. However, Senators La Follette, Brookhart and Wheeler are looked upon as the leading possibilities if such a party eventually takes the field."

Capital Eyes Political Side of Wilbur Naming

BY HARRY B. HUNT
NEA Service Writer

Washington, March 24.—President Coolidge's selection of Judge Curtis D. Wilbur of California, as secretary of navy, to succeed Edwin Denby, is inevitably viewed in Washington from its possible political as well as general significance.

The extent to which Wilbur's selection may strengthen Coolidge's position in California, as against Hiram Johnson, in the coming campaign, is naturally a subject for speculation.

Wilbur's appointment gives California two representatives in the cabinet—more than any other state. With the friends of a secretary of navy and a secretary of commerce—for Hoover is also a Californian—pulling for Calvin in his home state, Johnson's fight may be made much more difficult.

Wilbur's entry into the cabinet puts a number of things in pairs. He makes the second member of the cabinet who is a graduate of Annapolis Naval Academy, the other being Secretary of War Weeks. He is also the second member claiming Iowa as his birth state, the other Iowan being Hoover.

Maybe Hoover and Wilbur are expected to help out in Iowa as well as in California. For Iowa—due to the influence of Senator Brookhart and his liberal Farm-Labor and Nonpartisan League friends—is also a cause of some perturbation in the conservative Coolidge camp.

Despite the daily scandals emanating from Washington, involving high and low in a maze of alleged graft, corruption and general crookedness, the guess of the politically wise is that the criminal conviction of any of the high-ups named in the disclosures in altogether unlikely.

They may be discredited, as, in fact they already are, but they will not be convicted.

The situation reminds Pat Harrison, senator from Mississippi, of the old colored woman in his home town who was found carrying away from her place of employment, not only sufficient food for her own family, but also for her sister's family.

As is the case in southern households, the colored cook is expected to help herself to enough foodstuffs from her employer's larder to supply her own household.

So when this particular housewife had kept a check on Mandy for several days she decided it was time to call a halt.

"Mandy," she said, "you're a Christian, aren't you?"

"A suttinly am, Missy. Ah suttinly am!" Mandy responded fervently.

"And you expect to go to Heaven when you die?"

"Indeed Ah does."

"Well, Mandy," continued her mistress, "I'm afraid you're going to be disappointed. You have been stealing food. And you don't expect to go to Heaven if you keep on stealing, do you?"

Mandy threw back her head in a guffaw of merriment.

"Lawsy, missy," she said, "you's suttinly got all mixed up. Why—

WHEAT DOWNUncertainty of Legislation
Offsetting Factor

Chicago, Mar. 24.—Seasonable weather led to more or less selling of all grain today during the early dealings and brought about a moderate downturn in values. It was pointed out also that wheat was still 10 cents above an export basis. Uncertainty regarding legislation at Washington, however, tended to act as something of an offset. The opening which ranged from one-fourth to five-eighths cents lower, May $1.05 to $1.05½, and July $1.06½, was followed by a slight further setback all around.

In the absence of aggressive buying the decline carried the May delivery down to the lowest price yet for the 1923 crop. Numerous orders to sell and stop loss orders were disclosed. The close was heavy, 2½¢ to 2½¢ net lower, May $1.02½ to $1.03 and July $1.04½ to $1.04½.

OHIO MAN ON

The conversation he was alleged to have had with me was upon a Pennsylvania train leaving Chicago about 8 o'clock Sunday evening immediately after the convention for Washington. I did not go to Washington from the convention. I took the Twentieth Century Limited on the day immediately following the convention directly to Cleveland. I do not recall seeing Mr. Gilmore on the train and I did not have a conversation with him on the subject and I did not have a conversation with him at any time. He must have been confused on this matter.

No Proposition Made
"I became acquainted with Jake Hagan after he arrived in Chicago for the convention. I did not hear him make a proposition of any kind to Senator Harding or his associates for the delivery of the Oklahoma delegation. He certainly made no such proposition to me.
"As to the oil lands that Mr. Gilmore suggests that I was interested in, perhaps in southern California, I desire to say I have never owned or been interested in any real estate outside the state of Ohio and the state of Minnesota. I have not at any time owned an interest in oil lease or lands purporting to contain oil. I have never bought directly or indirectly, sold or owned, a share of oil stock.

Senator Walsh commented that the committee understood from Gilmore's testimony that Thompson was not interested in any oil land personally. "When did you first learn that Senator Harding would be nominated?" Senator Walsh asked.
"I learned along late in the evening prior to the nomination," Mr. Thompson began, "that the deadlock was hopeless between the three leading candidates and Mr. Harding would be given additional votes next day with the object of seeing whether he could develop strength."

Times' Story Up
The witness was excused and Chairman Ladd read a telegram from J. T. O'Neill of Will H. Hays' office in New York denying that he had ever authorized a newspaper statement to the effect that Harry F. Sinclair had given the Republican national committee 75,000 shares of Sinclair oil stock. O'Neill said he had no knowledge of such a circumstance.
Harold A. Vivian, a reporter for the New York Times, who wrote the story referred to saying that it was understood Hays would testify that oil stock was involved in the Sinclair contribution, then was called to the witness stand. He testified that O'Neill had told him Hays would testify that Sinclair had given 75,000 shares of stock to wipe out the party deficit.

HAYS DENIES STORY
Washington, Mar. 24.—Will H. Hays, testifying before the oil committee, denied H. F. Sinclair gave 75,000 shares of stock to aid in wiping out a deficit in the party campaign funds. He invited the committee to investigate the committee's books.
The former postmaster general and republican national chairman said he did not desire to decline to answer any question that he would state again that the story about Sinclair giving 75,000 shares of stock was false.

"I could only give my best judgment," Hays said, as to Sinclair's contribution. "My judgment is that it did not exceed $75,000."
Sinclair gave $75,000.
Hays said that some time after he retired from the cabinet in 1922, he suggested to Sinclair that he help make up the party deficit.
"It must have been two years after the 1920 election," he said, "yes—it must have been a year and a half after I left the cabinet."

"I may say in passing that I never heard of any lease on any naval reserve to anybody, directly or indirectly, until I read about them in the newspapers a month or two after I left the cabinet."
"I am trying to fix the time you suggested Mr. Sinclair," Senator Walsh said.

"I think it was in the summer of 1922," said Hays.
He could not recall where the conversation took place.
"Was the contribution paid to you?" "No, not paid to me, I helped to handle the funds. I asked Mr. Sinclair and others to contribute. I recollect, Sinclair told me he would be responsible for a maximum of $75,000. I think that $75,000 went to the campaign on a note at the Empire Trust."
"The details of this, I'll have to ask you to get from the committee," "Well from whom?"
Mr. Upham (Fred Upham, the party treasurer) I should think to whether we can furnish it.

"Is it not true that you had a fund in the north separate from these other funds?"
"No, (but) not true."

Denial Getting Liberty Bonds
Asked about the testimony of G. D. Wamberg, former private secretary to Sinclair, that he had given $25,000 in Liberty Bonds to a "Mr. Hayes," the witness said he had not facts on the subject. He added that the reference might be to Hinkle Hays, of Sullivan, Ind., his brother, who had "purely personal" transaction with Sinclair.

"You are welcome to go over my books," Hays said and repeated the fact that Hays and Hays of Sullivan, of which Hays and his brother are members, represents Sinclair interests, the witness said, adding that Sinclair had large interests in Indiana.
Hays declared he had severed his relations with the law firm when he entered the cabinet.

SINCLAIR PAID
FALL FOR AID
ON RUSS TRIP

Europe. This money was paid by those interested in the Russian transactions.

After reviewing the testimony of the Roosevelt's, particularly regarding the $60,000 said to have been paid to the foreman of Fall's ranch but later shown to have been paid to Sinclair's stock farm manager, the oil magnate said:
Says Roosevelt "Framed" Wahlberg
"Here was a disputed question regarding a material fact—a fact which if it could be established, would be interpreted everywhere as an illicit payment that I had made for some ulterior and improper purpose. The Roosevelt's knew that it would be so interpreted. Nevertheless they not only refrained from taking any action to establish the truth or falsity of their conclusions but they even counseled Wahlberg not to speak to Mr. Stanford, my personal attorney, who they knew would, by reason of his close association with my affairs, be familiar with the facts."

"The Roosevelt's evidently conceived it their duty not to investigate, not to try to ascertain what was true or what was false, but to volunteer their suspicions, their rumors and their shady insinuations without any regard to accuracy or truth."
"In July, 1919, Theodore Roosevelt, the present assistant secretary of the navy, brought his brother, Archie Roosevelt, to me and requested that I give Archie employment. Although the young man was equipped with no previous business experience of any value to us, I acted on the request and took him into our organization."
Says Roosevelt "Was Failure"
"I gave him opportunities that no other man in our organization has had and was enthusiastic in the hope that he would live up to the expectations that I held regarding him. I tried him in one after another of the branches of our business and each without success."

"He wanted to live in New York so I placed him in the foreign department and there again his work was a disappointment. He went to Russia, in May 1920, and at the conclusion of that trip, I was convinced that notwithstanding all the opportunities and encouragement that had been given him, he never would and never could make good."

"Roosevelt's salary during the period he was employed by us, ranged as follows:
"From Aug. 1, 1919, to Jan. 31, 1920, $5,000 per year; from Feb. 1, 1920, to April 30, 1921, $6,000 per year; from May 1, 1921, to June 30, 1922, $10,000 per year; from July 1, 1922, to end of his employment $15,000 per year.
"The salary increases were given to him partly as encouragement and evidence of our continuing hope in him, and partly in order to help him to meet the increased cost of supporting himself and his family in a manner appropriate to the work for which we were trying to train him."

DENY CUTS IN
SCHOOL COURSES

Reports in circulation that the Mandan board of education planned to eliminate the special courses in the Mandan high school were emphatically denied recently by E. A. Ripley and H. H. Warren, president and member of the board.

Rumors that some of the courses were to be cut from the high school curriculum probably arose through the fact that the board of education failed to elect teachers for domestic science, commercial course, physical training, manual training and other special subjects at a recent meeting when other teachers were elected. However, the special course teachers will be elected as soon as applicants have been carefully discussed which will be within a few weeks, it was stated.

CARRIERS ORGANIZE
Orr Bell, president; C. A. Knutson, Almont, vice president; Roland Burdick, Mandan, secretary, and treasurer, are the officers of a new Grant and Morton county rural mail carriers' association formed at a session at Almont, N. D. The members of this organization will meet with rural mail carriers from Stark and Emmets in a meeting at Flaher April 27th, when the organization will be extended.

DIETZ-ANDERSON
A quiet home wedding was solemnized Saturday at the Lutheran parsonage when Rev. C. J. Fylling united in marriage Miss Margaret Dietz, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. George Dietz, who reside ten miles south of Mandan, and A. O. Anderson of this city. They were attended by Miss Emma and William Dietz, sister and brother of the bride.

ELECTED PRESIDENT
F. C. Schultz of the Western Auto company was elected president of the Mandan Trade Extension club at a meeting held at the Commercial Club rooms. E. A. Ketter was chosen secretary and treasurer and H. H. Williams, sergeant-at-arms.

HEADS GUN CLUB
Attorney John F. Sullivan was elected president of the Mandan Gun club. The club was organized when Mr. Sullivan was promoted to the rank of Field Captain General at the annual meeting of the club held in the Commercial Club rooms.

OFFICIAL RETURNS
Official tabulation of returns from the Mandan city commission made a few slight changes in the unofficial count.

The official majority for Dr. A. O. Henderson over H. L. Hout for the presidency of the commission was 672, the vote standing 1042 to 370. The other commissioners received a vote as follows: Ben Anderson 998, Jos. Fredericks 710, as compared to H. A. Schmitt 619 and N. H. Romer 497.

In the vote for park commissioners Jos. P. Hess was elected for the five year term over M. C. Heinschou 639 to 498. Mrs. Starck received 651 votes and Chas. Wyman 702 in their race on stickers.

BANKERS WILL PLEAD SOON

Williston, N. D., Mar. 24.—A count of jail sentence of 90 days and a fine of $300 were imposed on Grant Minton, confessed violator of the liquor laws, in district court here by Judge George H. Moelling. Minton, who resides north of Temple, in this county, was indicted by the Williams county grand jury, now in session, on a charge of unlawfully possessing intoxicating liquors. He entered a plea of guilty before Judge Moelling.

It is expected that J. C. Hackett, cashier of the closed Farmers State bank of Grenora, N. D., will stand trial in district court on a charge of receiving deposits in an insolvent bank. M. E. Wilson of Minneapolis, president of the bank, indicted on a similar charge is ill in a Minneapolis hospital and no service has been secured as yet on the warrant for his arrest, which was wired to the Minneapolis authorities.

No new indictments have been reported out by the grand jury since last Saturday, it became known recently. The classification of witnesses who are under subpoena to testify before the jury has led to persistent rumors that the jury is investigating the condition of various closed banks in the county.

HORSES SENT
FROM WASHBURN

Washburn, N. D., Mar. 24.—Two cars of Percheron horses were shipped from Washburn last Monday to the horse market at Chicago, the first ever shipped out of Washburn to market. The men who were making the shipment were Everson Bros. and Fred Macomber, although there were several farmers in this locality who had horses in the shipment. Ben Everson accompanied the two cars to Chicago.

The 29 head shipped made a fine bunch of horses, some were a little light, weighing about 1200, while others weighed as much as 1700. The average was about 1600. The ages ranged from 5 to 10 years. All were of the draft type and in the bunch were some splendid looking matched teams. The average price expected for them is $100 to $150.

PROTECTION OF FORESTS ADVOCATED
Governor Indorses Proclamation Made by President Calvin Coolidge
North Dakota people are urged to join in observance of President Coolidge's proclamation of forest conservation by Governor Nestos in a statement issued today, in which the Governor said:

"President Coolidge has proclaimed the week beginning April 21st as Forest Protection Week and has asked the cooperation of the various states in making the week most valuable in safeguarding our national interest in forests and forest-try. I feel that North Dakota, though not a forest state, is vitally interested in the objects to be promoted by the setting aside of this week. Our forests are rapidly disappearing and the problem of providing building material for the future is becoming a very serious one. Not only is there danger of a lumber shortage but with all the available lumber concentrated in a small territory, the freight charges in shipping this lumber to the more populous centers of the country become almost unbearable."

"The American Tree Association of Washington has discovered that there are in the United States about eighty-one million acres of idle land fit for nothing but growing trees. Trees should be planted and grown upon all of these acres otherwise unproductive. Much could be done not only to obviate the danger of a lumber shortage but to increase the healthfulness and beauty of our various states if this were done. I am sure that North Dakota also will want to do its share in this good work and when the public is awakened to this need, I have no doubt that the citizens of North Dakota will cooperate with the federal government when a feasible plan for economical forestation has been adopted."

"Much can be done in an educational way to arouse public interest in this work and for that purpose the American Tree Association is organizing the Tree Planting Army of the Union. The only way to join the organization is by planting at least one tree. The association sends application blanks and free tree-planting suggestions to anyone who asks. Our state should surely have a part in such a campaign."

"Though North Dakota for many years has observed an Arbor and Tree Planting Day and the week thereof as a Native Life Week, which will come about a week later, yet I sincerely hope that all of our people will also observe the Forest Protection Week beginning April 21st, preparatory to Native Life Week and Arbor Day."

dependent ticket which has been followed in the past. Had the election laws voted on at the presidential primary carried a change in the system would have been made, but party organizations now will be maintained as heretofore.

It is expected that Governor Nestos will be renominated as candidate for the office of Governor, but vacancies in some state offices may result in some lively scraps for nominations for these positions.

Independent leaders find satisfaction in the election of Harrison Garrett of St. Thomas and R. P. Murphy of Bismarck as Republican and Democratic national committeemen, respectively.

Mrs. Nancy Lane Kauffman, daughter of the late Franklin K. Lane, secretary of the interior, is about to seek a stage career. She recently appeared in an amateur production in Kansas City Mo.

OHIO MAN ON

the conversation he was alleged to have had with me was upon a Pennsylvania train leaving Chicago about 8 o'clock Sunday evening immediately after the convention for Washington. I did not go to Washington from the convention. I took the train immediately following the convention directly to Cleveland. I do not recall seeing Mr. Gilmore on the train and I did not have a conversation with him on the subject and I did not have a conversation with him at any time. He must have been confused on this matter.

No Proposition Made
"I became acquainted with Jake Hamon after he arrived in Chicago for the convention. I did not hear him make a proposition of any kind to Senator Harding or his associates for the delivery of the Oklahoma delegation. He certainly made no such proposition to me.

"As to the oil lands that Mr. Gilmore suggests that I was interested in, perhaps in southern California, I desire to say I have never owned or been interested in any real estate outside the state of Ohio and the state of Minnesota. I have not at an time owned an interest in oil lease or lands purporting to contain oil. I have never bought directly or indirectly, sold or owned, a share of oil stock.

Senator Walsh commented that the committee understood from Gilmore's testimony that Thompson was not interested in any oil land personally. "When did you first learn that Senator Harding would be nominated?" Senator Walsh asked.

Times' Story Up
The witness was excused and Chairman Ladd read a telegram from J. T. O'Neill of Will H. Hays' office in New York denying that he had ever authorized a newspaper statement to the effect that Harry F. Sinclair had given the Republican national committee 75,000 shares of Sinclair oil stock. O'Neill said he had no knowledge of such a circumstance.

Harold A. Vivian, a reporter for the New York Times, who wrote the story referred to saying that it was understood Hays would testify that oil stock was involved in the Sinclair contribution, then was called to the witness stand. He testified that O'Neill had told him Hays would testify that Sinclair had given 75,000 shares of stock to wipe out the party deficit.

HAYS DENIES STORY
Washington, Mar. 24.—Will H. Hays, testifying before the oil committee, denied H. F. Sinclair gave 75,000 shares of stock to aid in wiping out a deficit in the party campaign funds. He invited the committee to investigate the committee's books.

The former postmaster general and republican national chairman said he did not desire to decline to answer any questions; that he would state again that the story about Sinclair giving 75,000 shares of stock was false.

"I could only give my best judgment," Hays said, as to Sinclair's contribution. "My judgment is that it did not exceed $75,000."
Sinclair Gave $75,000
Hays said that some time after he returned from the cabinet in 1922, he suggested to Sinclair that he help make up the party deficit.
"It must have been two years after the 1920 election," he said, "yes—it must have been a year and a half after I left the cabinet."
"I may say in passing that I never heard of any loan or any naval reserve to anybody, directly or indirectly, until I read about them in the newspapers a month or two after I left the cabinet."
"I am trying to fix the time you solicited Mr. Sinclair," Senator Walsh said.
"I think it was in the summer of 1922," said Hays.
He could not recall where the conversation took place.
"Was the contribution paid to you?" "No, not paid to me, I helped to handle the funds. I asked Mr. Sinclair and others to contribute. As I recollect, Sinclair told me he would be responsible for a maximum of $75,000. I think that $75,000 went to a part payment on a note at the Empire Trust."
"The details of this, I'll have to ask you to get from the committee." "Well from whom?"
"Mr. Upham (Fred Upham, the party treasurer) I should think to get from him. It is not true that you had a fund in the north separate from these other funds?"

"No, that's not true."
Denies Getting Liberty Bonds
Asked about the testimony of G. D. Wahneberg, former private secretary to Sinclair, that he had given $25,000 in Liberty Bonds to a "Mr. Hayes," the witness said he had not facts on the subject. He added that the reference might be to Hinkle Hays, of Sullivan, Ind., his brother, who had "purely personal" transaction with Sinclair.

"You are welcome to go over my books," Hays said and repeated the law firm of Hays and Hays of Sullivan, of which Hays and his brother are members, represents Sinclair interests, the witness said, adding that Sinclair had large interests in Indiana.

Hays declared he had severed his relations with the law firm when he entered the cabinet.

SINCLAIR PAID
ON RUSS TRIP

Europe. This money was paid by those interested in the Russian transactions.
After reviewing the testimony of the Roosevelt, particularly regarding the $68,000 said to have been paid to the foreman of Fall's ranch but later shown to have been paid to Sinclair's stock farm manager, the oil magnate said:
Says Roosevelt "Framed" Wahneberg
"There was a disputed question regarding a material fact—a fact which if it could be established, would be interpreted everywhere as an illicit payment that I had made for some ulterior and improper purpose. The Roosevelt knew that it would be so interpreted. Nevertheless they not only refrained from taking any action to establish the truth or falsity of their conclusions but they even counseled Wahneberg not to speak to Mr. Stanford, my personal attorney, who they knew would, by reason of his close association with my affairs, be familiar with the facts."

"The Roosevelt evidently conceived it their duty not to investigate, not to try to ascertain what was true or what was false, but to volunteer their suspicions, their rumors and their shady insinuations without any regard to accuracy or truth."

"In July, 1919, Theodore Roosevelt, the present assistant secretary of the navy, brought his brother, Archie Roosevelt, to me and requested that I give Archie employment. Although the young man was equipped with no previous business experience of any value to us, I acted on the request and took him into our organization."

"Says Roosevelt 'Was Falsely Placed' in the foreign department and there again his work was a disappointment. He went to Russia, in May, 1923, and at the conclusion of that trip, I was convinced that notwithstanding all the opportunities and encouragement that had been given him, he never would and never could make good."

"Roosevelt's salary during the period he was employed by us, ranged as follows:
"From Aug. 1, 1919, to Jan. 21, 1920, $5,000 per year; from Feb. 1, 1920, to April 30, 1921, $6,000 per year; from May 1, 1921, to June 30, 1922, $10,000 per year; from July 1, 1922, to end of his employment, $13,000 per year."
"The salary increases were given to him partly as encouragement and evidence of our continuing hope in him, and partly in order to help him to meet the increased cost of supporting himself and his family in a manner appropriate to the work for which we were trying to train him."

MANDAN NEWS

DENY CUTS IN SCHOOL COURSES

Reports in circulation that the Mandan board of education planned to eliminate the special courses in the Mandan high school were emphatically denied recently by E. A. Ripley and H. H. Warren, president and member of the board.

Rumors that some of the courses were to be cut from the high school curriculum probably arose through the fact that the board of education failed to elect teachers for domestic science, commercial course, physical training, manual training and other special subjects at a recent meeting when other teachers were elected. However, the special course teachers will be elected as soon as applications have been carefully discussed which will be within a few weeks, it was stated.

CARRIERS ORGANIZE
Orr Bell, president; C. A. Knutson, Almont, vice president; Roland Barnard, Mandan, secretary and treasurer, are the officers of a new Grant and Morton county rural mail carriers' association formed at a session at Almont, N. D. The members of this organization will meet with rural mail carriers from Stark and Emmons in a meeting at Flasher April 27th, when the organization will be extended.

DIETZ-ANDERSON
A quiet home wedding was solemnized Saturday at the Lutheran parsonage when Rev. C. J. Fylling united in marriage Miss Margaret Dietz, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. George Dietz who reside ten miles south of Mandan, and A. O. Anderson of this city. They were attended by Miss Emma and William Dietz, sister and brother of the bride.

ELECTED PRESIDENT
F. C. Schultz of the Western Auto company was elected president of the Mandan Trade Extension club at a meeting held at the Commercial Club rooms. E. A. Ketter was chosen secretary and treasurer and H. H. Williams, sergeant-at-arms.

HEADS GUN CLUB
Attorney John F. Sullivan was elected president of the Mandan Gun club succeeding Jos. Matland who was promoted to the rank of Field Captain General at the annual meeting of the club held in the Commercial club rooms.

OFFICIAL RETURNS
Official tabulation of returns from the Mandan city commission made a few slight changes in the unofficial count.
The official majority for Dr. A. O. Henderson over H. L. Henke for the presidency of the commission was 672, the vote standing 1042 to 370.
The other commissioners received a vote as follows: Ben Anderson 398, Jos. Fredericks 710, as compared to H. A. Schmitt 619 and N. H. Romer 497.

In the vote for park commissioners Jos. P. Hendrickson received the five year term over M. C. Hainsworth 659 to 498. Mrs. Starck received 851 votes and Chas. Wyman 762 in their race on stickers.

BANKERS WILL PLEAD SOON

Williston, N. D., Mar. 24.—A county jail sentence of 90 days and a fine of $300 were imposed on Grant Minton, confessed violator of the liquor laws, in district court here by Judge George H. Moelling. Minton, who resides north of Temple, in this county, was indicted by the Williams county grand jury, now in session, on a charge of unlawfully possessing intoxicating liquors. He entered a plea of guilty before Judge Moelling.

It is expected that J. C. Hackett, cashier of the closed Farmers State bank of Grenora, N. D., will stand trial in district court on a charge of receiving deposits in an insolvent bank. M. E. Wilson of Minneapolis, president of the bank, indicted on a similar charge is ill in a Minneapolis hospital and no service has been secured as yet on the warrant for his arrest which was wired to the Minneapolis authorities.

New indictments have been reported out by the grand jury since last Saturday, it became known recently. The classification of witnesses who are under subpoena to testify before the jury has led to persistent rumors that the jury is investigating the condition of various closed banks in the county.

HORSES SENT
FROM WASHBURN

Washburn, N. D., Mar. 24.—Two cars of Percheron horses were shipped from Washburn last Monday to the horse market at Chicago, the first ever shipped out of Washburn to market. The men who were making the shipment were Everson Bros. and Fred Macomber, although there were several farmers in this locality who had horses in the shipment. Ben Everson accompanied the two cars to Chicago.

The 29 head shipped made a fine bunch of horses, some were a little light, weighing about 1200, while others weighed as much as 1700. The average was about 1500. The ages ranged from 5 to 10 years. All were of the draft type and in the bunch were some splendid looking matched teams. The average price expected for them is $100 to $150.

PROTECTION OF FORESTS
ADVOCATEDGovernor Indorses Proclamation
Made by President
Calvin Coolidge

North Dakota people are urged to join in observance of President Coolidge's proclamation of forest conservation by Governor Nestos in a statement issued today, in which the Governor said:

"President Coolidge has proclaimed the week beginning April 21st as Forest Protection Week and has asked the cooperation of the various states in making the week most valuable in safeguarding our national interest in forests and forestry. I feel that North Dakota, though not a forest state, is vitally interested in the objects to be promoted by the setting aside of this week. Our forests are rapidly disappearing and the problem of providing building material for the future is becoming a very serious one. Not only is there danger of a lumber shortage but with all the available lumber concentrated in a small territory, the freight charges in shipping this lumber to the more populous centers of the country become almost unbearable.

"The American Tree Association of Washington has discovered that there are in the United States about eighty-one million acres of idle land fit for nothing but growing trees. Trees should be planted and grown upon all of these acres otherwise unproductive. Much could be done not only to obviate the danger of a lumber shortage but to increase the healthfulness and beauty of our various states if this were done. I am sure that North Dakota also will want to do its share in this great work and when the public is awakened to this need, I have no doubt that the citizens of North Dakota will cooperate with the federal government when a feasible plan for economical forestation has been adopted.

"Much can be done in an educational way to arouse public interest in this work and for that purpose the American Tree Association is organizing the Tree Planting Army of the Union. The only way to join the organization is by planting at least one tree. The association sends application blanks and free tree-planting suggestions to anyone who asks. Our state should surely have a part in such a campaign.

"Though North Dakota for many years has observed an Arbor and Tree Planting Day and the week thereof as a Native Life Week, which will come about a week later, yet I sincerely hope that all of our people will also observe the Forest Protection Week beginning April 21st, preparatory to Native Life Week and Arbor Day."

dependent ticket which has been followed in the past. Had the election laws voted on at the presidential primary carried a change in the system would have been made, but party organizations now will be maintained as heretofore.

It is expected that Governor Nestos will be renominated as candidate for the office of Governor, but vacancies in some state offices may result in some lively scraps for nominations for these positions.

Independent leaders find satisfaction in the election of Harrison G. Barnett of St. Thomas and R. P. Murphy of Bismarck as Republican and Democratic national committeemen, respectively.

BEES DANCE FOR PROFIT

Flapper's Characterization of "Bees' Knees" Held Not Wrong

Large, N. D., Mar. 24.—The flapper who characterized dancing as being the "bees' knees" may not be so far wrong after all. For bees do dance and they appear to derive as much pleasure from their dancing as do humans. But, unlike humans, there is a purpose to their dancing—a purpose, that is, entirely apart from the natural pleasure in such abandon. Scientists tell us that bees have two kinds of dances and that each kind is used to give definite information to the other bees. A form of expressive and interpretative dancing, it may be called. "Honey bees are known to have at least two styles of dances, which are used apparently as means of communication," says Dr. Webster, entomologist at the North Dakota Agricultural College. In a recent work by Dr. K. von Frisch, Dr. Webster tells us, published in German, there is much interesting information concerning the "language" of bees. When a honey bee comes into the hive fully laden with nectar from a newly discovered source, it performs what is known as the "round dance." The returned worker bee runs around in a narrow circle, usually accompanied by four or five other bees who follow her gyrations over the honey combs. This dance tells the workers in the hive of the new source of nectar, and they at once rush out in quest of it. The dance itself is short in duration, usually lasting no longer than a quarter of a minute. "Another kind of dance is described by the writer of this interesting book," says Dr. Webster. "This second dance is called the 'wag tail dance' and is a dance given by a returned worker bee gives the information to other workers that an abundant supply of pollen, or 'bee bread' is available outside."

OUR SENATE GRAND JURY

Not a few public men have viewed with regret the virtual stoppage of the wheels of Congress while members devote more and more time to investigations. Senator Borah, usually a busy investigator, warns the Senate that it must stop its "grand jury pursuits" and devote time to legislation. His advice may not be heeded, but it is timely.

If Congress is to clear away the annual appropriation measures and enact constructive legislation it must speed its program. Manifestly it cannot make progress as long as it is engaged in endless investigations.

There is a line of demarcation between an investigation and a "grand jury pursuit," as Senator Borah terms it. The investigations are primarily calculated to reveal the trend of affairs and bring forth information to aid the legislators in their business of enacting new laws. Investigations also serve the purpose of providing "pitiless publicity" which was urged by Woodrow Wilson as a necessity in good government. But when an investigation uncovers evidence which may be classed as criminal, it is time that it go before a grand jury. The prime purpose of the chief investigations in Washington has been accomplished. The publicity has been manifold and certainly pitiless. Good may result from opening to the light many hidden transactions.

The Senate Veterans Bureau investigation, long since past, was not interminable as it begins to appear some other investigations are. It was followed by grand jury action and indictments. Suits have been instituted in the oil disclosures in which criminal charges are made. When the evidence adduced before a congressional inquisitorial body has laid the basis for such action, it is well that it should be continued by a grand jury. Mr. Sinclair probably will not find many people criticizing him for refusing to testify when there are suits pending against him in which he is charged with fraud. He appears perfectly justified in reserving his testimony in his own defense in the courts. The Daugherty investigation committee has laid before the public much testimony which, if true, is sufficient to convict many men of law violations and send them to the penitentiary. Much of this evidence appears unsupported, and would not be given much weight in the secret sessions of a grand jury. The character of much of the testimony lends weight to the charge that some of those prosecuting the inquiry are animated by the motive of debasing certain officials in the public eye through insinuation and innuendo, regardless of the facts. How much better would it be if these witnesses could be called before a grand jury, and if their testimony justified, indictments returned on their evidence.

There is no sentiment in the country that the guilty shall escape, nor are those who complain of the methods being pursued by some of the inquiring senators desirous that the guilty shall go free. The investigations furnished thrilling and interesting reading for a time. What is desired now is not hot air but action.

WE ARE BECOMING A GYPSY RACE

How many different towns have you lived in? How many times have you moved from one house to another? How many miles have you traveled since birth?

Most of us find that, as the years slip by, we travel more, move oftener and change jobs more frequently.

Gone are the days when son followed in father's footsteps generation after generation, living in the same town, the same old family homestead, generally the same line of work as parent.

There are many indications that we are becoming a race of Gypsies—rovers. It is the natural result of better transportation facilities, especially the auto.

Twenty years ago, a man or woman taking a trip of 1000 miles was the talk of the town. Today one attracts more attention if he doesn't take an occasional long trip than if he does. People move from house to house, city to city, job to job, farm to farm.

Covered wagon days are returning—nearly everyone a pioneer, yearning to be somewhere else, doing something different.

One symptom of our Gypsy tendency is the increasing custom of not building for permanence. Houses used to be built to last forever, if possible. Now they're thrown together. Owners don't care. Most of them expect to move in a few years.

Same with auto ownership—the buyer, when he buys, already is looking ahead to the date when he'll "trade in the old car on a new one."

E. W. Forbes, head of Fogg Art Museum of Harvard, warns that the painting of some of our modern artists may not last more than 50 years because of the use of inferior canvas or paints. Excellent materials are on the market for the artist, but often he is careless in buying and using. Bad paint, improperly varnished, may fade to a blur instead of lasting centuries like the masterpieces of the old-time painters.

All this is typical of our generation's attitude. "Today's the thing. Let tomorrow take care of itself."

Two definite reasons why we are becoming Gypsy rovers and do not build for permanence. First, we realize more than ever before that life is merely a journey, a training school or gymnasium for self-improvement.

We view life as a Pullman car—and are quite willing to leave peanut hulls and banana peels behind us.

Then, too, we build only for permanence in big projects like the Panama Canal, because we are busy creating new ideas, processes and devices—and willing to replace repeatedly the material things expressing these ideas, processes and devices. Former generations, for instance, were content to use a horse and buggy and make them last as long as possible. We conceive or build the IDEA of the auto—and that idea is permanent even if individual autos are not.

CRIPPLING PARTY GOVERNMENT

Minnesota has gone farther than any other State in the Union in breaking down parties and destroying party lines by legal means. To some minds this seems commendable, but experience is gradually proving the policy to be costly.

Lack of party government means personal politics. It means that the public has no way to locate responsibility. Individuals gain office on the strength of promises they cannot fulfill. They drop out and others climb to the top in the same way. The public always pays, and the public is beginning to be fed up with this sort of thing.

High taxes, big appropriations, big bond issues, are natural sequels to this lack of responsible, representative party government.

Minnesota is the only State that refuses to allow party lines to be drawn in the Legislature. As long as that system continues, says that veteran watchdog of the treasury, J. F. Jacobson, we must expect a twenty per cent increase in appropriations every two years. The Republican State Convention very properly resolved in favor of a return to parties in the Legislature.

Such party organizations as the law societies in Minnesota are personal. The nominees for office select the State committees. Instead of building up organizations from the bottom, they are handed down from the top.

Minnesota is one of the few States where voters do not give their party affiliations when they register. Even when they vote in party primaries, no record is made of party preference.

The Minnesota ballot form encourages "split ticket" voting. It is just as hard to vote a straight party ticket as to jump about and vote for candidates of all parties. Even in North Dakota there is a column for each party.

"Independence" is at a premium in Minnesota. Propaganda against parties has been popular. Muckrumpism has been canonized as a virtue.

In this, as in many other things, a virtue carried to excess becomes a vice. So it has come about in Minnesota.

Agitation against parties as such is beginning to subside. Now that the radical forces have dropped their "nonpartisan" pose and are trying to weld themselves into a new political machine. As a result, the State may see before long a definite trend back to representative party government.

There are signs of a relaxation in sentiment with regard to the independent pose. The change comes as people see for themselves the failure of individual politics compared with party government of the Minnesota type. This failure is seen notably in the annual tax statements.

NORTH DAKOTA

Senator Johnson's friends express a strong confidence in him, and that they feel that the new returns from the severely rural precincts of North Dakota will overcome the indecent plurality for President Coolidge which the figures from the cities and towns indicate. It is noticeable, however, that the same trust in the great isolationist and regressive are looking fondly to South Dakota, whose primaries will be held next week. The yearning for Mr. Johnson reminds the comparative sociologist of the distribution of mosquitoes in New Jersey. Every community affects to be free from those pests, but is sure that they are perniciously active in some neighboring or remote town.

All sorts of trouble, agricultural and financial, have fallen upon North Dakota. There, if anywhere, special and general grievances and miscellaneous blind recalcitrance might be expected to show themselves most sharply and strongly. Yet Mr. Coolidge has seemed to have a favorite with the Republican farmers there. Not only has he shown an interest in their misfortunes, but there is a quality in his character and career that they appreciate. Senator Ladd and Senator Frazier, Republicans by way of the Nonpartisan League, officially approved him, subject to the patent of Mr. La Follette. That shrewd and subtle politician withdrew his name from the Republican primary ballot of North Dakota. He "was unable to do his share of the fighting," he faithfully insisted. They trusted his name in. He got a considerable vote, which the true blues yet to be heard from are depended upon to swell. If he had been able to do his share of fighting anywhere except in Washington, the Hill-fighters, wouldn't have enjoyed the result.

There has never been much more than noise in the Johnson campaign. If the best he can do has been done in North Dakota, which would seem the best "territory" to "sell" him in, he will be forced to believe that the "Republican rank and file" which he is continually summoning, is hopelessly deaf.—New York Times.

The government is moving promptly to preserve the freedom of the air as means of disseminating information and knowledge.

They track mud into the house, snore when they sleep, get mad when women have no reason for doing things, leave their dirty shirts in the middle of the floor, and smile at other women, but they are necessary.

So by an enormous outlay of money Tom Sims Newspaper has secured a series of articles on "How to Marry."

Today's article is as follows: A girl trying to catch a husband should eat lots of corn-on-the-cob. The exercise makes her lips soft, pliable and warm.

And where is the buggy and finely combed horse that mother and dad used to drive, the famed one-horse shay and the rickety, slow moving hack? Just relics of old that have traveled their course and in memory are barely alive. They've been here and gone and we know they will never come back.

Mary's "headache" had continued for two days, but Clavering came to her house by appointment that same afternoon at five o'clock. She kept him waiting fully ten minutes, and wandered back and forth in her room upstairs with none of her usual eagerness to welcome him after even a brief separation. The violence of her revolution had passed, but she was filled with a vast depression, apathetic, tired, in no mood for love-making. Nor did she feel up to acting, and Clavering's intuitions were often very inconvenient. He would never suspect the black turmoil of these past two days, nor its cause, but it would be equally disconcerting if he attributed her low spirits to the arrival of Hohenhauer. What a fool she had been to have made more than a glancing reference to that last old love-affair, almost forgotten until that night of stark revelation. She must have enjoyed talking about herself more than she had realized, unable to resist the temptation to indulge in imposing details. Or self-justification? Perhaps. It didn't matter, and he must have "placed" Hohenhauer at once this morning, and he would imagine that she was depressed at the thought of meeting him. There was no one on earth she wanted to meet less, although she felt a good deal of curiosity as to the object of his visit to Washington.

She heard the maid in the dressing-room and was visited by an inspiration. She called in the woman, gave her a key and told her to go down to the dining-room and bring her a glass of curacao from the wine-cupboard.

The liquor sent a glow of warmth through her veins and raised her spirits. Then, reflecting that Clavering never rushed at her in the fashion of most lovers, nor even greeted her with a perfunctory kiss, but waited until the mood for love-making attacked him suddenly, she took a last look at her new tea-gown of corn-flower blue chiffon and went down stairs with a light step.

"Shocking to keep you waiting," she said as they shook hands, "I came in late. You'll stay to dinner, of course. I had an engagement, but broke it, as I'm still feeling a little out of sorts."

"Never saw you look better. Nor in blue before. You look like a lily in a blue vase, or a snow maiden rising from a blue mist. Not that I'm feeling poetic today, but you do look ripping. What gave you a headache? I thought you scorned the ills of the flesh?"

"So I do, but I had spent three hours in Judge Trent's office that morning, and you know what these American men are. They keep the heat on no matter what the temperature outside, and every window closed. On Tuesday the sun was blazing in besides, and Judge Trent and the two other men I was

And if she remained and Hohenhauer wished to see her she could hardly keep on making excuses for nearly a fortnight. So she merely smiled up at Clavering, who was gazing down at her intently, and said softly, "Of course I'll go. I always have sport things in my wardrobe, and I think it's wonderful. Miss Dwight, I suppose—and hope. And the De Witt Turners?"

Madame Zattiany had no respect whatever for the Lucy Stone League, and invariably forgot the paternal names of the emancipated young wives of the men she found interesting.

"They can't get away. Gora, yes; and Rolly Todd, the Boltons, the Minors, Eva Darling, Babette Gold, Gerald Scores."

"Miss Darling is rather a nuisance. She flung her arms around me the other night at the Minors' and left a pink kiss on my neck. She was very tight. Still, she is amusing, and a favorite of Din's."

"I would have submitted the list to you in the first place, darling, but I know I should have to take what I could get. The only two I really care about are Gora and Todd. But there wasn't a moment's loss. I wish to heaven I'd thought of it before, but that play had to be finished, and it looked as if the date of your sailing might be postponed, after all."

"You must come, Mary dear."

"Obliged to confer with smoked cigars incessantly. It gave me the first headache I'd had for twenty years. I felt as if I'd been poisoned."

She looked up at him, smilingly, from her deep chair as he stood above her on the hearthrug. He didn't believe a word of it; he was convinced she had been advised of Hohenhauer's coming, and that for some reason, the news had upset her; but he had no intention of betraying himself. Moreover, he didn't care. He was too intent on his own plans.

"The rest has done you good," he said, smiling also. "But as you were looking rather fagged before you came down with that two-days' headache, I made up my mind that you needed a change and, dropped Din a hint to open

A LETTER FROM LESLIE PRES-COTT TO RUTH ELLINGTON DEAR GIRL:

You can't imagine how glad I was to get your letter, perhaps most because it told me that you and Jack were friends again. Jack also wrote me to that effect, and he also explained how and why he took Sally Atherton to dinner.

Dear old Jack! He has no more idea of the conventions than any other man. I expect the whole town was agog with the fact that while I was gone he took his secretary out to dinner, no one for a moment remembering that if there was anything at all between Jack and Sally the last thing either of them would do would be to dine together in a conspicuous place as the most popular lunch room in town.

MONDAY

... famous once in the calendar ...

Now just a day in the Week

Turn back the calendar a century or so and you'd find yourself in an era of famous Mondays.

For instance, in England, there was Plough Monday, when farmer lads held festival; Collop Monday, when school-boys penned verses to Bacchus; Mace Monday, with its feasts of bacon and beans; Black Monday, Fat Monday, Bloody Monday, and many more.

Finally, here in America, there was "Blue Monday," observed by women every week—not with feasts and merrymaking, but with fatiguing toil, with tiring rubbing and lifting. For "Blue Monday" was washday.

But today—who remembers all these famous Mondays? They are scarcely mentioned outside of books on antiquities. And the "Blue Monday" that once was washday has become—well, just a day of the week.

For the modern laundry has brought both relief from the worst of household drudgery and, too, the advantage of five washdays. Hundreds of women send us their bundles on Thursday and Friday; other hundreds on Tuesday and Wednesday; while some still prefer the old-fashioned Monday.

Naturally, every woman, who uses our services has benefited. Prompt, dependable delivery, better work, lower prices—all these are results of the five-washday practice.

This has also enabled us to offer a wide variety of services. They are described below—among them is one that exactly fits your needs and purse. Choose the service which suits you best; then phone us to send for your bundle.

I wonder why this dinner bust was between a maid and a master and why as it such a sweet morsel for the guests to roll under their tongue? I am quite sure it was a very nice dinner, there would be a secret to dine with me, whether in my own case, of course, fairly or not, and I would not want to say anything unkind about it. I am positively uneasy, dear Jack about things. I have just had a letter from Jack, in which he has announced his engagement to Alice. I never realized before, Ruth, that that sister of mine was so clever. I am very glad that she is intended to marry Karl from the moment she knew I had refused him.

Isn't it strange that sometimes we are not as well acquainted with the members of our own families as we are with comparative strangers? I am sure I know you better than I ever knew Alice.

Well, Alice is a very nice letter about Alice. He tells me he hopes I will forgive him for being glad I left him for Jack. I don't think he used the word "bitch," but his meaning was identical.

I wonder if you'll think I am a kind of a dog in the manger, as it were, if I say I am sorry that Alice and Karl have fallen in love with each other. Karl and I have been too nearly lovers for me ever to look upon him as a brother. Men are different, I guess, but he very companionable. I guess Karl, and between you and I, dear, I do not believe there is a loving, unselfish word he has used when making love to Alice that he has not already said to me.

I wonder if all men are like that? It is a new thought. I believe I am going to ask Jack when I get home if all the worst things the ever said to me were only repetitions of those he had said to someone else.

I am coming home every night, dear. Until then, believe me to be Your loving friend, LESLIE

I wonder why this dinner business between a male employer and a female employee makes such a stir. Why is it such a sweet morsel for the gossips to roll under their tongue? ## OUR SENATE GRAND JURY

Not a few public men have viewed with regret the virtual stoppage of the wheels of Congress while members devote more and more time to investigations. Senator Borah, usually a busy investigator, warns the Senate that it must stop its "grand jury pursuits" and devote time to legislation. His advice may not be heeded, but it is timely.

If Congress is to clear away the annual appropriation measures and enact constructive legislation it must speed its program. Manifestly it cannot make progress as long as it is engaged in endless investigations.

There is a line of demarcation between an investigation and a "grand jury pursuit," as Senator Borah terms it. The investigations are primarily calculated to reveal the trend of affairs and bring forth information to aid the legislators in their business of enacting new laws. Investigations also serve the purpose of providing "pitiless publicity" which was urged by Woodrow Wilson as a necessity in good government. But when an investigation uncovers evidence which may be classed as criminal, it is time that it go before a grand jury. The prime purpose of the chief investigations in Washington has been accomplished. The publicity has been manifold and certainly pitiless. Good may result from opening to the light many hidden transactions.

The Senate Veterans Bureau investigation, long since past, was not interminable as it begins to appear some other investigations are. It was followed by grand jury action and indictments. Suits have been instituted in the oil disclosures in which criminal charges are made. When the evidence adduced before a congressional inquisitorial body has laid the basis for such action, it is well that it should be continued by a grand jury. Mr. Sinclair probably will not find many people criticizing him for refusing to testify when there are suits pending against him in which he is charged with fraud. He appears perfectly justified in reserving his testimony in his own defense in the courts. The Daugherty investigation committee has laid before the public much testimony which, if true, is sufficient to convict many men of law violations and send them to the penitentiary. Much of this evidence appears unsuppressed, and would not be given much weight in the secret sessions of a grand jury. The character of much of the testimony lends weight to the charge that some of those prosecuting the inquiry are animated by the motive of debasing certain officials in the public eye through insinuation and innuendo, regardless of the facts. How much better would it be if these witnesses could be called before a grand jury, and if their testimony justified, indictments returned on their evidence.

There is no sentiment in the country that the guilty shall escape, nor are those who complain of the methods being pursued by some of the inquiring senators desirous that the guilty shall go free. The investigations furnished thrilling and interesting reading for a time. What is desired now is not hot air but action.

WE ARE BECOMING A GYPSY RACE

How many different towns have you lived in? How many times have you moved from one house to another? How many miles have you traveled since birth? How many miles have you traveled since birth?

Most of us find that, as the years slip by, we travel more, move oftener and change jobs more frequently.

Gone are the days when son followed in father's footsteps generation after generation, living in the same town, the same old family homestead, generally the same line of work as parent.

There are many indications that we are becoming a race of Gypsies—rovers. It is the natural result of better transportation facilities, especially the auto.

Twenty years ago, a man or woman taking a trip of 1000 miles was the talk of the town. Today one attracts more attention if he doesn't take an occasional long trip than if he does. People move from house to house, city to city, job to job, farm to farm.

Covered wagon days are returning—nearly everyone a piooper, yearning to be somewhere else, doing something different.

One symptom of our Gypsy tendency is the increasing custom of not building for permanence. Houses used to be built to last forever, if possible. Now they're thrown together. Owners don't care. Most of them expect to move in a few years.

Same with auto ownership—the buyer, when he buys, already is looking ahead to the date when he'll "trade in the old car on a new one."

E. W. Forbes, head of Fogg Art Museum of Harvard, warns that the painting of some of our modern artists may not last more than 50 years because of the use of inferior canvas or paints. Excellent materials are on the market for the artist, but often he is careless in buying and using. Bad paint, improperly varnished, may fade to a blur instead of lasting centuries like the masterpieces of the old-time painters.

All this is typical of our generation's attitude. "Today's the thing. Let tomorrow take care of itself."

Two definite reasons why we are becoming Gypsy rovers and do not build for permanence. First, we realize more than ever before that life is merely a journey, a training school or gymnasium for self-improvement.

We view life as a Pullman car—and are quite willing to leave peanut hulls and banana peels behind us.

Then, too, we build only for permanence in big projects like the Panama Canal, because we are busy creating new ideas, processes and devices—and willing to replace repeatedly the material things expressing these ideas, processes and devices. Former generations, for instance, were content to use a horse and buggy and make them last as long as possible. We conceive or build the IDEA of the auto—and that idea is permanent even if individual autos are not.

CRIPPLING PARTY GOVERNMENT

Minnesota has gone farther than any other State in the Union in breaking down parties and destroying party lines by legal means. To some minds this seems commendable, but experience is gradually proving the policy to be costly.

Lack of party government means personal politics. It means that the public has no way to locate responsibility. Individuals gain office on the strength of promises which they cannot fulfill. They drop out and others climb to the top in the same way. The public always pays, and the public is beginning to be fed up with this sort of thing.

High taxes, big appropriations, big bond issues, are natural sequels to this lack of responsible, representative party government.

Minnesota is the only State that refuses to allow party lines to be drawn in the Legislature. As long as that system continues, says the veteran watchdog of the treasury, J. F. Jacobson, we may expect a twenty per cent increase in appropriations every two years. The Republican State Convention very properly resolved in favor of a return to parties in the Legislature.

Such party organizations as the law recognizes in Minnesota are personal. The nominees for office select the State committees. Instead of building up organizations from the bottom, they are handed down from the top of the few States where party lines do not give their party affiliations when they register. Even when they vote in party primaries, no record is made of party preference.

The Minnesota ballot form encourages "split ticket" voting. It is just as hard to vote a straight party ticket as to jump about and vote for candidates of all parties. Even in North Dakota there is a column for each party.

Independence is at a premium in Minnesota. Propaganda against parties has been popular. Mug-wumpism has been canonized as a virtue.

In this, as in many other things, a virtue carried to excess becomes a vice. So it has come about in Minnesota.

Agitation against parties as such is beginning to subside, now that the radical forces have dropped their "nonpartisan" pose and are trying to sell themselves into a new political machine. As a result, the State may see before long a definite trend back to representative party government.

There are signs of a revulsion in sentiment with regard to the independent pose. The change comes as people see for themselves the failure of individual politics compared with party government of past eras. This failure is seen notably in the annual tax statements. Minnesota Journal.

NORTH DAKOTA

Senator Johnson's friends express a stronger confidence, perhaps, than they feel that the slow-moving returns from the severely rural precincts of North Dakota will overcome the inherent plurality for President Coolidge which the figures from the cities and towns indicate. It is noticeable, however, that even the trumpeters of the great isolationist and restrictive are looking fondly to South Dakota, whose primaries will be held next week. The yearning for Mr. Johnson reminds the comparative sociologist of the distribution of mosquitoes in New Jersey. Every Jersey community affects to be free from those pests, but is sure that they are perniciously active in some neighboring or remote town.

All sorts of trouble, agricultural and financial, have fallen upon North Dakota. There, if anywhere, special and general grievances and miscellaneous blind recalcitrancy might be expected to show themselves most sharply and strongly. Yet Mr. Coolidge has seemed to be a favorite with the Republican farmers there. Not only has he shown an interest in their misfortunes, but there is a quality in his character and career, that has endeared him to the farmer. Ladd and Senator Frazier, Republicans by office of the Non-Partisan League, officially approved him, subject to the patent of Mr. La Follette. That shrewd and subtle politician withdrew his name from the Republican primary ballot of North Dakota. He "was unable to do his share of the fighting." The faithful insisted. They passed his name in. He got a considerable vote, but the true blues yet to be heard from are depended upon to swell it. If he had been able to do his share of fighting anywhere except in Washington, the Higgins wouldn't have enjoyed the result.

There has never been much more than noise in the Johnson campaign. If the best he can do has been done in North Dakota, which would seem the best "territory" to him in the "bell blues yet to be heard from," the "Republican" ear and eye, which he is continually "commending," is hopelessly deaf. New York Times.

THE AIR A PUBLIC UTILITY

The government is moving promptly to preserve the freedom of the air as means of dissemination of information and knowledge. While it is denied by radio agencies that they are thought of as one of any of them to obtain a monopoly in broadcasting, a contrary opinion is expressed by some public authorities directly interested in keeping the air open to all broadcasters who comply with regulations that have been found necessary.

Say, what has become of the grind organ man who ground out his tin-penny tune? And where is the monk who amused you when you were a kid? There once was the day when you gleefully ran to greet this queer, every June. But you don't see them now as, so often, you formerly did.

And where is the buggy and finely combed horse that mother and dad used to drive, the famed one-horse shay and the rickety, slow moving hack? Just relics of old that have traveled their course and in memory are barely alive. They've been here and gone and we know they will never come back.

Recall from the by-gones the old hitching post with stude in the center of town, that crude little curvings and iron rings that hung on the side. And where are the slates of those kiddies would boast and the curfew that gained much renown? Through progress these relics of old days have gradually died.

How true is the saying, the world moves along; how quickly the changes are born. We have—and give up—and there's nothing that seems here to stay. What's priceless today we will sell for a song and shortly we hold it in scorn. Now what would YOU guess will be missing ten years from today?

Mary's "headache" had continued for two days, but Claverling came to her house by appointment that same afternoon at five o'clock. She kept him waiting fully ten minutes, and wandered back and forth in her room upstairs with some of her usual eagerness to welcome him after even a brief separation. The violence of her revelation had passed, but she was filled with a vast depression, apathetic, tired, in no mood for love-making. Nor did she feel up to acting, and Claverling's, intuitions were often very inconvenient. He would never suspect the black turmoil of these past two days, nor its cause, but it would be equally disconcerting if he attributed her low spirits to the arrival of Hohenbauer. What a fool she had been to have made more than a glancing reference to that last old love-affair, almost forgotten until that night of stark revelation. She must have enjoyed talking about herself more than she had realized, unable to resist the temptation to indulge in imposing details. Or self-justification? Perhaps. It didn't matter, and he must have "placed" Hohenbauer at once this morning, and would imagine that she was depressed at the thought of meeting him. There was no one on earth she wanted to meet less, although she felt a good deal of curiosity as to the object of his visit to Washington.

She heard the maid in the dressing-room and was visited by an inspiration. She called in the woman, gave her a key and told her to go down to the dining-room and bring her a glass of curacao from the wine-cupboard.

The liquor sent a glow of warmth through her veins and raised her spirits. Then, reflecting that Claverling never rushed at her in the fashion of most lovers, nor even greeted her with a perfumery kiss, but waited until the mood for love-making attacked him suddenly, she took a last look at her new tea-gown of cornflower blue chiffon and went down stairs with a light step.

"Shocking to keep you waiting," she said as they shook hands, "but I came in late. You'll stay to dinner, of course. I had an engagement but broke it, as I'm still feeling a little out of sorts."

"Never saw you look better. Nor in blue before. You look like a lily in a blue vase, or a snow maiden rising from a blue mist. Not that I'm feeling poetic today, but you do look rippity. What gave you a headache? I thought you scorned the lily of the flesh?"

"So I do, but I had spent three hours in Judge Trent's office that morning, and you know what these American men are. They keep the heat on no matter what the temperature outside, and every window closed. On Tuesday the sun was blazing in besides, and Judge Trent and the two other men I was giving you a farewell house-party. He jumped at the idea and it's all arranged. You'll have eight days of outdoor life and some sport, as well as a good rest. He's got a big comfortable camp on a beautiful lake, where we can boat and fish."

"But Lee—" She was almost gasping.

"No buts. Not only do you need a rest before that long journey but I want these last days with you in the mountains where I can have you almost to myself. It seems to me sometimes that I do not know you at all—nor you me. And to roam with you in the woods during the day and float about that lake at night—it came to me suddenly like a foretaste of heaven. I couldn't stand the thought of the separation otherwise. Besides, here you'd be given a farewell luncheon or dinner every day until you sailed. I'd see nothing of you. And you'd be worn out. You must come, Mary dear."

Mary felt dimly suspicious, but it was possible that he had read his morning papers hastily, or that in his mental turmoil that night she had told him her story he had paid little attention to details, or forgotten them later. He certainly had never alluded to the man since. And this sudden impetuous plan was so like him that he needed no foreign impulse.

But she answered with some hesitation: "I'd like it, of course. And Judge Trent has nothing more for me to sign until the last minute. But—a woman always has a thousand things to do before going on a journey—"

"Your maid can do all that. And pack your trunks. She goes with you, doesn't she? And you'll only need warm sweaters and skirts up there. We never dress. You'll not need a maid."

"Well—but—do you mean to tell me that the whole thing is settled?"

"To the last detail. There'll be twelve of us, including Din."

"Really, Lee, you are high-handed. You might have consulted me first."

"No time to waste on argument. We'll only have a little over a week there as it is. It takes a day to go and another to return, and you'll need one day here in New York before you sail. I made up my mind you should go if I had to take you by force. I will have those last days in the Adirondacks."

Her faint resentment vanished and she felt a languid sense of well-being in this enveloping atmosphere of the tactless imperious male, so foreign to her experience; of freedom from the necessity for independent action; and the prospect was certainly enchanting. Moreover, she would be able to avoid seeing Hohenbauer in surroundings where this strange love-affair of her's had obliterated the past (for the most part), and she had found, for a time at least, happiness and peace. She would see him in Vienna, of course, and she had no wish to avoid him there; so doubt they would work together and as impersonally as they had sometimes done in the past; but to see him here, even in the drawing-room, which held no sacred memories, would be another and uglier blot on her already dimming idyl; and a subtle infidelity to this man whose every thought seemed to be of her in spite of all he had to inflame and excite his ego.

And if she remained and Hohenbauer wished to see her she could hardly keep on making excuses for nearly a fortnight. So she merely smiled up at Claverling, who was gazing down at her intently, and said softly, "Of course I'll go. I always have sport things in my wardrobe and I think it a wonderful idea. Now tell me who is going. Miss Dwight, I suppose—and hope. And the De Witt Turners?"

Madame Zattiany had no respect whatever for the Lucy Stone League and invariably forgot the paternal names of the emancipated young wives of the men she found interesting.

"They can't get away. Gora, yes; and Rolly Todd, the Boltons, the Minors, Eva Dalling, Babette Gold, Gerald Scores."

"Miss Darling is rather a nuisance. She flung her arms around me the other night at the Minors' and left a pink kiss on my neck. She was very tight. Still, she is amusing, and a favorite of Din's."

"I would have submitted the list to you in the first place, darling, but I know I should have to take what I could get on such short notice. The only two I really care about are Gora and Todd. But there wasn't a moment to lose. I wish to heaven I'd thought of it before, but that play had to be finished, and it looked as if the date of your sailing might be postponed, after all."

"You must come, Mary dear."

obliged to confer with smoked cigars incessantly. It gave me the first headache I'd had for twenty years. I felt as if I'd been poisoned."

She looked up at him, smilingly, from her deep chair as he stood above her on the hearthrug. He didn't believe a word of it: he was convinced she had been advised of Hohenbauer's coming, and that for some reason the news had upset her; but he had no intention of betraying himself. Moreover, he didn't care. He was too intent on his own plans.

"The rest has done you good," he said, smiling also. "But as you were looking rather ragged before you came down with that two days' headache, I made up my mind that you needed a change and dropped Din a hint to open

FARGO HIGH STILL CHAMP

Takes State Basketball Title For Third Time

Valley City, March 24.—Fargo high school's "Midgets" won their third consecutive state basketball championship here Saturday night, defeating Grand Forks, and three Fargo players were selected on the officials' all-star team.

The all-star team of the officials follows: first team, Rusch, Fargo; Walen, Grand Forks, forwards; Fisher, Fargo, center; McChesney, Fargo; Ekel, Valley City, guards; second team, Burdick, Mandan; O'Keefe, Grand Forks, forwards; McCracken, Grand Forks, center; Eberly, Valley City; Fuller, Fargo, guards.

In the closing tournament games Saturday night, Fargo high beat Grand Forks 14 to 11 for the state championship. The Grand Forks team surprised the Fargo crowd by the hard fight and close game. Devils Lake beat Mandan in a consolation game, 24 to 18. Mandan was expected to finish above Devils Lake in third place in the tournament.

Billy Evans Says

Of late we have been fed up on the pro and con of golf as it relates to baseball.

Some managers have placed an absolute ban on golf during the training period and are enforcing it.

These managers want the players to give their entire attention to baseball while getting ready for the season. After it opens they intend to permit the playing of golf with proper discretion.

Other managers say they can see no harm in the game at any time, if the players do not let golf get a greater hold than baseball.

What does it all mean?

Played with proper discretion just about sums up the golf situation with reference to baseball.

Golf is more or less a test of individual prowess. One day a player takes 35 strokes to cover 18 holes. The next day he cuts it to an 18.

One gets a personal satisfaction as well as dissatisfaction out of golf that comes from no other game. The play of the individual constantly fluctuates and the score does likewise.

There is always a desire on the part of the golfer, and that goes for the dyed-in-the-wool professional, to better some previous score. He has an objective every time out.

For that reason golf is an insidious pastime, and unless one is very determined it breaks in on his routine business.

Playing 18 holes, two or three times a week in the early morning hours during spring and fall harms no ball player.

On the other hand, 18 holes on any hot summer morning takes its toll out of the ball player for the afternoon's work.

It is that feature to which most managers object. They don't want the players to overdo it during the hot weather when the race in the major has usually narrowed down to certain clubs.

I once heard a manager say that he would much prefer his men to play 9 holes of golf early in the morning than sleep until a late hour.

Playing golf won't hurt any ball player unless he prefers his golf to baseball. Such being the case, he cuts into his livelihood to no small degree.

Mobile, Ala., March 24.—Manager George Sisler of the St. Louis Browns, working out here, is banking on his Pacific Coast League battery, pitcher George Lyons and catcher Tony Rego, to strengthen his club in its one weak spot, the battery department.

During his winter stay on the coast, Sisler heard so many nice things about the battery that he traded five of his players, including the veteran catcher Josh Billings and pitcher Wayne Wright. Lyons, pitching for Los Angeles, a club that finished sixth in the Coast League race, won 18 and lost 16 games.

Catcher Rego had a batting average of .280 in the 41 games he worked. While neither did anything sensational last season, both are regarded as youngsters of great promise. Sisler seeks to build up his team and wants promising youngsters rather than fading veterans.

TWO HARD-HITTING PITCHERS
They do say that pitchers cannot hit. The averages of the 1923 world series fail to bear out that belief. Red Bentley, with an average of .600, was high among the Giants while Joe Bush, with a mark of .429, showed the way to the Yankees.

Presenting Ike Boone, Boston Red Sox outfielder, the biggest major league player in captivity.

Boone, who a year ago received a brief trial with the New York Giants, is six feet and then some, and in the proverbial pink weighs 280. When he reported to the Giants last spring he was many pounds overweight. This made McGraw think he was too slow and awkward for the big show.

Boone has always been a great slugger in the minors and for a big fellow is really fast on his feet. Manager Lee Fohl of the Boston Red Sox is of the opinion that Boone is going to come through for him and has already announced that the big fellow will start the season in right field.

Food From American Kin Promises To Thin Out German Bread Lines And Lessen Danger of Epidemics

Clamor for bread! Cameras always interest children, hence the intent expression on the faces of the little ones in the group shown above.

But the women, wives and mothers of Düsseldorf, Germany, have just one mission in life—to procure enough food to relieve the distress of their families. They are striving to crowd into a small bake shop and get bread. More than half of them are doomed to the bitter disappointment that must come because of Germany's food shortage.

This scarcity of rations is having an appalling effect on the health of the German people. No less distinguished an authority than Dr. Haven Emerson, former Commissioner of Health of New York City and an authority on community health, said recently after a tour of that country that it was a "perfect organization for the spread of tuberculosis."

The undernourishment of the people has also made them easy prey for other dread maladies and unless food is provided for them without delay much suffering and death probably will occur.

The American Committee for Relief of German Children, of which Major-General Henry T. Allen, former commander of the American forces on the Rhine, is chairman, is prepared to act as the intermediary in hastening this relief to the sufferers. The funds it proposes to raise will be devoted exclusively to the free feeding of children, hence a portion of the population will be cared for. But what of the men and women who are in distress, thousands of them professionals whose source of income has been shattered by the economic unrest?

The American Committee has provided a method by which they may be fed. This is the food package department, which on payment of ten dollars will deliver to any designated person in Germany, occupied territory included, 119 pounds of American food. This package will contain 49 pounds of flour, 23 pounds of rice, 10 pounds of sugar, 8 pounds of cooking fats, 3 pounds of cocoa and 24 one-pound tins of evaporated milk.

Residents of America who have relatives or friends in Germany are especially urged by General Allen to take advantage of this service. The delivery of the packages is insured by the German government which also is paying all transportation costs in that country.

Applications for the food packages may be made either in person or by mail at the headquarters of the Food Package Department of the American Committee for the Relief of German Children, 42 Broadway New York City.

STANLEY WASHBURN WRITES NOVEL WITH SCENES LAID IN NORTH WOODS

Stanley Washburn of Lakewood, N. J., of the Washburn Lignite Coal Company and president of the North Dakota Lignite Coal Operators Association, is the author of a novel, "Two in the Wilderness," published by J. B. Lippincott Company. The Minneapolis Journal, reviewing the book says:

"It is a notable achievement to have written a story of the vast Canadian northwest without the use of a single mounted policeman. Neither is there any real villain in the piece, and no one is shot. In fact it is not at all what one expects of a western Alberta yarn, for it holds no intrigue and no fighting, being a simple love story, placed in an ultra woodland setting with the largest section of outdoors that there is anywhere as its background. It is also a good love story, though the girl is a conventional figure. As to that, the author is as disarming in his preface as the moon of 'Midsummer Night's Dream'—('All I have to say is to tell you, that the lantern is the moon; 'I, the man in the moon' . . . and this dog, my dog.')" Mr. Washburn explains: "The horse is a real horse, the dog is a real dog, and the man a near-real man. As for the girl—well, she was as real as the writer, who doesn't pretend to know girls, could make her." Would that other writers were as modest and as frank. His claim is fully justified as to the dog, "Zing," and the white "cayuse," and the hero is far more human than most of his tribe. So, too, the girl, Mary, does well enough.

"To get them started he has to kill off two guides of no consequence and a rather expensive lady chaperone. This leaves the man and the haughty girl alone in the woods, hundreds of miles from anywhere, his job being to get her out without breaking her heart."

Wooden Shoes

"The peasants in America do not wear wooden shoes at all, even in the fields!" writes Abbe Pierre, of Gascony. "No, the peasants there wear shoes of leather, although I should think that sabots would be much more serviceable, not only on the roads, but plowing . . . And wooden shoes are far less expensive. Ah, that America is an extravagant country!"

Advertisements haven't yet taken the heavy wooden shoes from Gascon feet—nor yet the heavy wooden shoes from Gascon minds. Gascony thinks in the past. America in the future.

Advertisements make the difference. They crisscross improvements in countless directions across the miles. They distribute Fords, furnaces and electric lights so widely that foreigners think you extravagant to enjoy them. They put you in touch with the latest conveniences. They help so many people enjoy those conveniences that their cost to you is small.

You read advertisements to link yourself with the best—to substitute speed for the shambling progress you otherwise would have to make in the lonely wooden shoes of isolation.

Do you read them regularly? Good habits pay.

FARGO HIGH STILL CHAMP

Takes State Basketball Title For Third Time

Valley City, March 24.—Fargo high school's "Majors" won their third consecutive state basketball championship here Saturday night, defeating Grand Forks, and three Fargo players were selected on the official all-star team.

The all-star team of the officials follows: First team, Rush, Fargo; Wilson, Grand Forks; forwards, Fisher, Fargo; center, Metten, Fargo; Eckel, Valley City; guards, second team, Mandan, Mandan; O'Keefe, Grand Forks; forwards, McKracken, Grand Forks; guards, Valley City; Fisher, Fargo; Elmer, Valley City.

In the closing tournament games Saturday night, Fargo high beat Grand Forks 14 to 11 for the state championship. The Grand Forks team, carrying the Fargo crowd to the limit, fought a close game.

David Lase, Mandan, in a consolation game, 24 to 15. Mandan was expected to eliminate Devils Lake in third place in the tournament.

Billy Evans Says

Of late we have been fed up on the production of golf as it relates to the game.

Some managers have placed an undue emphasis on golf during the tournament and are enforcing it.

These managers want the players to give the attention to baseball, and a golfing team for the season. And a series of golf with the players of golf with the players of golf.

Other managers say they can see the harm in the game at any time, if the players do not let golf get a proper share of the season.

What does it mean?

Players with proper direction just what they need for the golf season.

Golf is more or less a test of individual prowess. One day a player takes 10 strokes to cover 15 holes.

The next day he cuts it to an 8. This is a personal satisfaction as well as a personal satisfaction.

There is always a desire on the part of the golfer, and that goes for the dyed-in-the-wool professional, to better some previous record. He has an objective every time out.

For that reason golf is an insidious pastime, and unless one is very determined it breaks in on his routine business.

Playing 18 holes, two or three times a week in the early morning hours during spring and fall hampers no ball player.

On the other hand, 18 holes on any hot summer morning takes its toll out of the ball player for the afternoon's work.

It is that feature to which most managers object. They don't want the players to overdo it during the hot weather when the race in the major has usually narrowed down to certain clubs.

I once heard a manager say that he would much prefer his men to play 9 holes of golf early in the morning than sleep until a late hour.

Playing golf won't hurt any ball player unless he prefers his golf to baseball. Such being the case, he cuts into his livelihood to no small degree.

HOLLOCHER HARD TO FOOL
Shortstop Charley Holloch, who refuses to report to the Chicago Cubs, because of a salary difference.

A Versatile Olympic Hope

BOB LEGENDRE

Because he has approached the world's best performances in the 100-meter run, the broad jump, the discus throw, the javelin throw and the 1500-meter run, Bob Legendre of the Newark A. C. is considered one of Uncle Sam's best bets to win the Olympic Pentathlon.

Five For Two Trade Looks Good To Sisler

By NEA Service

Mobile, Ala., March 21. Manager George Sisler of the St. Louis Browns, working out here, is banking on his Pacific Coast League battery, Pitcher George Lyons and catcher Tony Rego, to strengthen his job in a weak spot, the battery department.

During his winter stay on the coast, Sisler heard so many good things about the battery that he traded five of his players, including the hardest man in the National League to make out, the whiffed only five times last season, Eddie Collins, with eight strikeouts, was the toughest batter to fool in the American League.

PLAN SUMMER BASEBALL BODY

Carson, N. D., March 21. Organization of a Grant-Rettig county amateur baseball league will be proposed at a meeting called for March 27 at New Leipzig. Communities to enter teams will include Mott, Bentley, New Leipzig, Elgin, Hill and Carson.

KEEP IN PRACTICE

Bath Cummings, national golf champion, and Marion Hellins, who won the title three seasons ago, are leaving in time for Carson. Miss Cummings plans to leave next month for England to play in the big tournament in that country. She was an unsuccessful competitor last spring.

SHAWKEY DOUBTFUL ASSET

Bob Shawkey is the one question mark on the New York Yankees' pitching staff. Shawkey's arm ailed him a great deal last year and it is no certainty that he will be able to work regularly this season. Shawkey's peculiar delivery is hard on the arm.

BUFFALO'S NEW IDOL

Buffalo fans have transferred their affections from Rocky Kanas, veteran lightweight, to Jimmy Shattley, a light heavyweight. Shattley, only 19 years old, but shapes up like a real contender, being fast, clever and a hard puncher. Shattley gained national fame the other night by defeating the sensational Young Stridling in six rounds.

MRS. SHOCKER ONLY WIFE IN BROWNS' CAMP

Mobile, March 21. Urban Shocker, star outfielder, who was with the Browns, put on their padded backs last fall, because the club's officers wouldn't let him take his wife east with the team, has apparently forgotten all about his grievance, and is down here working out with the confidence of a rookie.

N. B. M. Shocker has Mrs. Shocker here with him.

N. B. M. Mrs. Shocker is the only wife in camp.

SISLER HAS NO SET TRAINING RULES FOR TEAM

Mobile, March 21. There are no training rules for the camp of the St. Louis Browns.

The deacon athletes can play in the golf they want to, say nothing of man jumping, pole, and sky jumping.

"I never liked rules when I was a player and I don't intend to have any now that I am a manager," Sisler explained.

TWO HARD-HITTING PITCHERS

They do say that pitchers cannot hit. The averages of the 1923 world series fail to bear out that belief. Jack Bentley, with an average of .600, was high among the Giants while Joe Bush, with a mark of .429, showed the way to the Yankees.

Guild To Develop Music and Drama

Pasadena, Cal., Mar. 24.—Civic development of music and drama is the purpose of the Pasadena Community Guild, recently organized by wealthy residents here who have undertaken the mission of constructing a community playhouse. It is a non-profit organization, capitalized at $50,000. The organizers include Dr. George Ellery Hale, astronomer of the Carnegie Solar Observatory; Mount Wilson; Dr. Robert A. Millikan, discoverer of the electron; Arthur H. Fleming, donor of large funds to the California Institute of Technology; and a dozen or more notable leaders in science and finance.

The community players not only have presented many programs of art, music and drama in Pasadena, but have been heard in many sections of the United States through radio programs presented from Los Angeles stations. A site has been acquired by the institution, and plans are made for construction of a $200,000 playhouse.

Swiss Electrify Their Railways

Berne, Mar. 21.—The electrification work of the Swiss national railways has passed the halfway point. About 500 miles have been completed with about as much more to be electrified.

Food From American Kin Promises To Thin Out German Bread Lines And Lessen Danger of Epidemics

Clamoring for bread! Cameras always interest children, hence the intent expression on the faces of the little ones in the group shown above.

But the women, wives and mothers of Dusseldorf, Germany, have just one mission in life—to procure enough food to relieve the distress of their families. They are striving to crowd into a small bake shop and get bread. More than half of them are doomed to the bitter disappointment that they will come because of Germany's food shortage.

The scarcity of rations is having an appalling effect on the health of the German people. No less distinguished an authority than Dr. Haven Emerson, former Commissioner of Health of New York City and an authority on community health, said recently that it was a "perfect organization for the spread of tuberculosis."

The undernourishment of the people has also made them easy prey for other dread maladies and unless food is provided for them without delay much suffering and death probably will occur.

The American Committee for Relief of German Children, of which Major-General Henry T. Allen, former commander of the American forces on the Rhine, is chairman, is hastening this relief to the sufferers. The funds it proposes to raise will be devoted exclusively to the free feeding of children, hence a portion of the population will be cared for. But what of the men and women who are in distress, thousands of them professionals whose source of income has been shattered by the economic unrest?

The American Committee has provided a method by which they may be fed. This is the food package department, which on payment of ten dollars will deliver to any designated person in Germany, occupied territory included, 119 pounds of American food. This package will contain 49 pounds of flour, 25 pounds of rice, 10 pounds of sugar, 8 pounds of cooking fat, 3 pounds of cocoa and 24 one-pound tins of evaporated milk.

Residents of America who have relatives or friends in Germany are especially urged by General Allen to take advantage of this service. The delivery of the packages is insured by the German government which is paying all transportation costs in that country.

Applications for the food packages may be made either in person or by mail at the headquarters of the Food Package Department of the American Committee for the Relief of German Children, 42 Broadway New York City.

Stanley Washburn of Lakewood, N. J., of the Washburn Lignite Coal Company and president of the North Dakota Lignite Coal Operators' Association, is the author of a novel, "Two in the Wilderness," published by J. B. Lippincott Company, The Minneapolis Journal, reviewing the book says:

He writes lovingly and intelligently of them, which is much more than can be said for most of the makers of outdoor romances.

Japs Recognize Plight of Ag

Tokio, Mar. 24.—A separate department of agriculture is to be established by the Japanese government to cope with the increasingly serious problems of rural life and production. Heretofore agriculture and commerce have been grouped under one ministerial department.

Next to the reconstruction of the districts devastated by the great earthquake of last September, the most serious problem confronting the government is the farm problem. Conditions similar to those in the United States obtain here, farmers receiving comparatively low returns for their products in an era of high prices.

Picture Holds Much Interest

"The Whipping Boy" is a motion picture dramatization of one of the most shameful chapters in American history. Russell G. Creighton, National Adjutant of The American Legion, declared recently when asked about the picture, starring Barbara Bedford and Lloyd Hughes, which is being exhibited throughout the United States under the auspices of The American Legion.

The picture, which has been breaking theatre attendance records wherever shown, will be exhibited at The Auditorium Theatre, beginning Mar. 26th under the sponsorship of the Lloyd Spetz Post of The American Legion.

In discussing the picture, Mr. Creighton said, "The American Legion, always working only for the utmost good of America, has taken this incident as an object lesson. The picture is founded on a famous Tabert case, the case of a North Dakota youth who died from abuse in a Southern prison camp.

"The Tabert case was undoubtedly only an aggravation of conditions. The case and conditions were first exposed by a Post of The American Legion and the investigation which followed resulted in abolition of the convict leasing system in the state where the tragedy occurred.

"In exhibiting the dramatized version of the Tabert case, the Legion hopes to assist still more in bringing public attention to a great evil which still exists in some states, to the discredit of all."

Wooden Shoes

"The peasants in America do not wear wooden shoes at all, even in the fields!" writes Abbe Pierre, of Gascony. "No, the peasants there wear shoes of leather, although I should think that sabots would be much more serviceable, not only on the roads, but plowing . . . And wooden shoes are far less expensive. Ah, that America is an extravagant country!"

Advertisements haven't yet taken the heavy wooden shoes from Gascon feet—nor yet the heavy wooden shoes from Gascon minds. Gascony thinks in the past. America in the future.

Advertisements make the difference. They crisscross improvements in countless directions across the miles. They distribute Fords, furnaces and electric lights so widely that foreigners think you extravagant to enjoy them. They put you in touch with the latest conveniences. They help so many people enjoy those conveniences that their cost to you is small.

You read advertisements to link yourself with the best—to substitute speed for the shambling progress you otherwise would have to make in the lonely wooden shoes of isolation.

Do you read them regularly? Good habits pay.

WHEELER ILL, DAUGHERTY'S PROBE PUT OFF

Hearings Probably Will Be Resumed Wednesday, Chairman Brookhart Says

Washington, Mar. 24.—(By the A. P.) Further hearings in the Senate investigation of Attorney-General Daugherty today were postponed until Wednesday. The postponement was due to the illness of Senator Wheeler, Democrat, Montana, the committee prosecutor and to conflicting engagements by other committee members.

Senator Wheeler is confined to his bed with a severe cold. Another member, Senator Moses, Republican, New Hampshire, was engaged with the opening of a new investigation into Rio Grande land transactions. Still another, Senator Jones, Republican, Washington, was called out of the city.

Chairman Brookhart said the inquiry would proceed Wednesday, even if Senator Wheeler should be unable to return. The Montana Senator has been suffering from a severe cold for several days. When the committee resumes Wednesday, it hopes to conclude with the testimony and cross-examination of Miss Roxie Stinson, divorced wife of Jess Smith, the dead friend of the Attorney-General.

Further investigation of circumstances surrounding the death of Jess Smith may be made shortly after the committee resumes. Chairman Brookhart said today the committee was not thoroughly satisfied with the official verdict of suicide and it is probable Coroner Nivett of the District of Columbia would be called.

Campbell Back From Cities on New Party Plan

Wallace Campbell, editor of Jim Jam Jams, returned this morning from Minneapolis where he went to confer with Robert R. Pointer of Dearborn, Michigan, the Presidential nominee of the National Progressive People's party. Mr. Campbell said that Mr. Pointer made a most favorable impression on the Progressive leaders of Minnesota who had gathered to meet him at the Dyckman hotel. Charles B. Cheney, the well known political writer of the Minneapolis Journal devoted a column to his interview with Mr. Pointer and detailed the aims of the Progressive party. Mr. Pointer called attention to the fact that in North Dakota, the Progressive vote, polled by Johnson and La Follette taken together, largely outnumbered the Coolidge vote. Candidate Pointer promises to wage an aggressive campaign in every

Crops Measured by Meter on Auto Dashboard

For recording the measurements of fields planted in various crops, a meter attached to the dashboard of an automobile has been included in the equipment of the Department of Agriculture. The instrument is operated from the same gear mechanism used for an ordinary speedometer. Each crop may be recorded on its particular section and the dimensions of the "stands" are shown in feet. At the right of the device is a scale that registers the total distance covered in miles and the number of trips made. As each patch of a certain kind is measured, it is added to the total. Each scale is labeled and has a button which must be pressed to throw it into action. Ten principal crops are provided for as well as idle ground and pasture land.

Renewing Golf Balls

A cheap and practical method of renewing old golf balls is to fill the cracks with white rubber cement, which can be obtained at any drug store. After filling the cracks, the entire surface of the ball is painted. By repairing the balls in this way there are no bumps or cracks, which have a tendency to influence the course of the ball, and the whitened surface will show up well. It is a good idea to wash the balls in cool soapy water before going to the grounds, as this helps to retain the old luster and removes stains.

Secrets of the Seven Seas Told by "Bottle Papers"

To learn the speed and direction of ocean currents, government experts use "bottle papers." Accurate knowledge of these drifts is important to navigation, and the safety of hundreds may depend upon it. Small slips, with directions for their return printed in the principal languages, are given to ship captains, to be sealed in flasks and thrown overboard. Months or years later, some return. One floated nearly across the Atlantic and back, and another crossed the widest part of the Pacific in a little over two years. A third, dropped near the Cape of Good Hope, was picked up on the western coast of Australia.

Sand for Railroads' Safety Costs Millions Yearly

While big figures are used in telling the cost of safety to the railways, the amazing item to the average person is the amount spent for sand. Four tons are required for every mile of road in the United States, according to the figures of one trunk line with 7,500 miles of track. As this road is in the middle west and south, where mountains are not encountered, the figures given are regarded as conservative. The cost of putting the sand into the engine box is placed at $2.50 a ton as an average minimum. For all the roads, the yearly cost is estimated at $2,637,070. For the most part the sand is brought from river bottoms and dried by waste steam at the round house.

There are now 145,000 radio sets on the farms throughout the country, which receive crop reports from 150 government wireless stations, according to recent estimates.

Magnets Lay Nails Straight in Packing Boxes or Kegs

To lay nails straight in containers, a packer equipped with magnets is reported to have been built by a Swiss inventor. The machine is said to be able to fill kegs, boxes, or paper cartons, and to handle wire rods, hairpins, knife blades and fishhooks with equal ease. The articles to be boxed up are poured into a huge vibrating hopper in lots of about a thousand pounds and are straightened out on large trays below.

Inexpensive Sign Hanger

Substantial and attractive metal signs can readily be made from lengths of pipe and fittings and a piece of sheet metal. The hanger is attached to a building as shown in the illustration; no guy wires or bracing of any kind are required to support it, still it is so solid that the strongest winds will not loosen it. Two different designs are shown; one for mounting the sign at right angles to the sides of a building and the other for mounting it on a corner so that it can be seen from two streets. The sign itself is a piece of heavy sheet metal attached to the pipe frame by means of metal clips, passed around the pipe and riveted to the edge of the sheet metal as shown.

The Auditorium both Saturday afternoon and night. The cast included a dozen people and Walter Vernon was well made up as "Jiggs" but Victoria Vincent was apparently a little too buxom to satisfy the audience that she really was "Maggie." The show does not pretend to be in the class of shows usually brought to the Auditorium, as was shown by the reduced prices.
